DEATH OF A FORMER CITIZEN OF PLATTSMOUTH

Dr. W. H. Dearing, Formerly of This County, Passes Away at His Home in Lushton, Neb.

The sad news was received here last evening by friends of the death at his home at Lushton, Neb., of Dr. W. H. Dearing, formerly a prominent resident of this county, and for years one of the leaders in the democratic party in the county, as well as this part of the state. The cause of his death was heart failure, as the doctor had been suffering from trouble with his heart for years, and in the past year had suffered a very serious breakdown physically.

Dr. Dearing came here in the eighties from Iowa and located at Wabash, where he practiced medicine for several years, and in 1891 was selected by the democrats as a candidate for clerk of the district court, and after a strenuous campaign was elected to the office, but in the political upheaval of 1895 he was defeated for re-election by G. F. Houseworth, and retired to the practice of his profession, but in 1896 the democrats and populists elected him to the state senate to represent this county in that body, and he served his term out, retiring to accept a position as superintendent of the feeble minded institute at Beatrice, and later, under Governor Poynter, was head physician at the insane hospitals at Lincoln and Norfolk, retiring when the republican administration came into power in the state. He continued to reside here for a short time after his leaving the state institutions, and in 1902 the family removed to Lushton, where he had since continued the practice of medicine. Besides the widow, two sons, Glenn of Lincoln and Howard of Lushton, are left to mourn his loss.

Dr. Dearing was a very popular man throughout the county, and the news of his death was the cause of much regret among the large circle of friends with whom he had been associated during the years of his residence here. He was a genial, pleasant gentleman and his gentlemanly ways won the friendship of all with whom he came in contact. The funeral will be held this afternoon from his late home and the interment made in the cemetery at Lushton. There were a number of the old friends very desirous of attending the funeral, but the short notice of the death would not permit of their reaching Lushton in time to attend.

THE "GO-TO-CHURCH" MOVEMENT HAMPERED BY INCLEMENT WEATHER

The "Go-to-Church" movement in this city yesterday labored under rather unfavorable circumstances in the threatening weather that held many away from their attendance at the different houses of worship. The attendance was very good, however, at all the churches, as the Christian and Presbyterian churches have both had new pastors enter into their duties in these churches, and their sermons yesterday were very pleasing to the worshippers present at the services.

At the Episcopal church Rev. Wesley Barnes of Nebraska City occupied the evening worship hour celebrating the services of the church, as well as giving instruction to the class for confirmation.

The attendance at the Methodist church was very pleasing and the sermons delivered by the pastor, Rev. F. M. Druliner, were up to the usual high standard of those which this gentleman is so well known.

The two Catholic churches were well filled at the different services, as these churches usually have a very fair average of the members present at their different services.

Able to Be Out Again.

Saturday afternoon Everett Wiles, who was injured so severely on Thanksgiving day in an automobile accident south of the city, was able to be down town, although forced to use crutches. Mr. Wiles had one of his hips dislocated and fractured in the accident and this was healing nicely when he fell at home and reopened the injury and for the past few months has been at the hospital in Omaha waiting for the members to heal up. This is certainly a pretty long spell to be practically bedfast, and Mr. Wiles greatly appreciates being able to be up and around, even though it is with crutches.

LITTLE GIRL BITTEN BY DOG TAKEN TO PASTEUR INSTITUTE IN CHICAGO

Saturday evening Mrs. Ada Farris, who resides in the vicinity of Mynard, in company with her little daughter, Ethel, departed for Chicago, where the little girl is to take treatment at the Pastauer institute in that city for a bite received on her wrist from a pet dog. The little girl was playing around home on last Tuesday with the dog, which was apparently not dangerous, when it jumped on her and inflicted quite a deep bite on her right wrist. On the following morning the dog died, and it was at once feared that the animal might have been suffering from the effects of the rabies and the later developments in the case are such that it is feared that Ethel is suffering from hydrophobia and it is to prevent any more serious developments that the girl is being taken to Chicago for treatment by the most eminent specialists in this line of work in the United States. The dog that bit the girl was a small black and tan dog which was at the Farris home, and later this dog was observed to be snapping and biting at all with whom it came in contact. The case will be watched with great interest by everyone in the city, as to determine if the child is afflicted with hydrophobia.

HAIL STORM SATURDAY EVENING LOOKED VERY OMINOUS FOR A WHILE

This city was visited by quite a heavy storm of rain and hail Saturday evening about 5:30, which for a few minutes looked as though it would do considerable damage, but fortunately the force of the storm was somewhat broken when it burst over the city. The clouds in the west for a few minutes presented a very foreboding aspect and the more timid-minded were apprehensive of some great storm that was about to sweep down upon us. For the period of several minutes the hail came down in a steady down-pour and the sidewalks and streets were whitened by them, and in a few minutes the hail was followed by a heavy down-pour of rain that caused the street to run with water to the depth of several inches, and the bottom land east of the Burlington station was covered with the overflow water from the city sewers to the depth of several feet, but the new ditch dug along the road through the bottom served a good purpose in taking off the water very rapidly. In South Park the wind seems to have been more violent than in other sections of the city, as a barn on the premises of Mr. Hale was blown off its foundation by the wind, but without a great loss to the building.

MANUEL TRAINING IN PUBLIC SCHOOL SYSTEM

The Benefit to Be Derived by the Young Pupils Who Attend Our City Schools and They Need It.

From Friday's Daily.

One of the problems our schools have to solve is to prepare young people in the ways of living so that they will be able to hold a job when they get it. Too often school work is done in a reckless way because the pupil does not realize its importance or regards the work as something which he will never use. Later when society calls for this same work in the form of service the boy or young man fails to make good. Manual training has helped much in the solving of this vital problem. The knowledge of the use of tools and their power to change the useless into the useful, has made clear thinkers of many boys and girls in every community where manual training is taught in the schools. The boy finds the application of the principles learned in the workshop will make possible articles of play that add to his enjoyment, according to the care he takes in making them. This will help to hold him in school during the adolescent age. The age when so many of our Plattsmouth boys drop out of school. This is because he wants to do something that counts. If the Plattsmouth boy takes manual training in school he will be getting something that he can take right home and apply. Too many of our boys are drifting from home because of a lack of something to do which they regard worth while. The expenses of the average home will be diminished when the boy can handle tools and a paint brush. He can mend furniture that would perhaps be thrown away, make useful articles for the kitchen, such as breadboards, clothes racks, shelves, towel rollers and many other needed things that always cost money. The boy had better be doing this than wasting his time in places of bad influence, as many of our boys are doing for lack of other things that appeal to them. Manual training gives the boy a practical application of the studies he takes in school. His arithmetic becomes real when he can apply it to the making of the parts of a chair or even a thing so simple as a towel roller or handkerchief box. The making of every joint brings out the real application of his geometry. He sees his mistakes without being told by the teacher, because he is dealing with "things," not mere characters on paper.

One trouble with our school work is the fact that pupils are always ready to excuse their own errors because errors only effect the grade the pupil gets. This habit of inaccuracy, if carried into life, becomes vital. Manual training makes the mistakes of school appeal as vital, because the boy can see them for himself. If a boy makes a mistake of a fraction of an inch in a problem in board measure his teacher will have difficulty in getting him to see it, but if he is making a table and gets one leg too short, the consequence of his error so impresses him that he places the blame on himself and makes the correction. A prominent manual training teacher relates this incident: A boy who received 90 per cent in geography went to his home well satisfied with his grade and did not care to improve upon it by trying to know his work better. He had 90 per cent, that was good enough. He came to his manual training class, made a joint, took the joint to his instructor, who complimented him upon the good work, which would have been graded above 90. The boy then turned to his teacher and showed him the defects of the joint and asked if he might make another and correct these errors. In this case the boy saw the flaws of his own work because it was the kind of work a boy could judge, while geography and most of our school work, which we are equipped to do in Plattsmouth schools, can only be judged by the teacher and the pupil has no part in it. This boy strove to become more efficient because he saw the need of it in something besides a grade.

Thus a boy's school work becomes a practice which when carried into life will make him a young man in which the business world has confidence and trust instead of the shiftless, happy-go-lucky element that constitutes so large a percent of our young life here in Plattsmouth. A prominent authority has said that a school with a well equipped manual training department is able to develop carefulness, neatness, attention, accuracy, honesty, economy, industry and success to the maximum and reduce carelessness, slovenliness, heedlessness, errancy, deception, wastefulness, idleness and failure to the minimum; while the school without manual training always leaves ample room for the last named qualities and the community suffers the consequences. Can Plattsmouth afford to be without manual training and domestic science in her schools, even though more room is needed for their introduction?
