WHAT IS SAID OF SOME PLATTS-MOUTH PEOPLE

Senior Editor of Weeping Water Republican Pays His Respects to Some of Our People.

The senior member of the Republican firm accepted the invitation of Reed & Taylor to accompany them to Platts-mouth Monday in their new demonstrator Ford car as ballast, and from all appearances our weight of 225 pounds was the proper amount, as the car worked fine and landed us at the county seat in one hour and ten minutes from the time we started. While Reed & Taylor and Mr. J. R. Josephson, who also was a member of our party, were looking after some business matters, we put in our time calling on the office force at the court house. We found County Judge Allen J. Beeson busy pounding a typewriter, and when we asked him to let us do that for him he gave us his usual smile and said, "No, thank you, while I am doing this I am out of mischief."

The sheriff, C. D. Quinton, we met in the judge's office. He is always busy. Register of Deeds A. J. Snyder was busy in his office, but informed us that the rush was probably over for a time, as the season for transfers had about passed. County Treasurer W. K. Fox, who is an expert in his line of work, is just as proficient when it comes to a friendly chat, and we greatly enjoyed our visit to his sanctum. James Robertson, clerk of the district court, was not in the office, and as the day was fine, we presumed he had gone fishing. We met J. L. Richie who has filed for county superintendent on the republican ticket, in the commissioners' room doing some clerical work. He seems to be a bright young man. When we first called at the clerk's office Mr. Libershal was not in, and his assistant, B. A. Rosencrans, was attending to all business. We called later and made the acquaintance of Mr. Libershal, whom we found to be a very pleasant gentleman to meet. County Superintendent Miss Mary Foster, we met in her office preparing to make a trip out over the county to visit the schools, and she informed us that the eighth grade commencement will be held at Weeping Water on June 4, which we will give a more detailed announcement of later. We did not see County Attorney C. H. Taylor at the court house, but met him while out at dinner. He seemed to go after the matters before him there with the same vigor that he goes after matters that come before him in a legal way.

After dinner our party called at the Platts-mouth Journal office and were most cordially met by Colonel Bates, who was busy at his desk, but took time to greet us with a hearty hand-shake that made us feel welcome, until his son, Robert, was called, who escorted us through their mammoth plant and explained the workings of their new modern machinery, which was very much enjoyed, especially by the writer. Our next call was at the new county jail, where a force of men were busy with the work, having the brick work nearly completed. The outside of the structure has a very fine appearance, but the iron cages give a chill to the inside and you feel just as well or better on the outside. On the street we met D. C. Morgan, and although he is now postmaster in the largest town in the county, he is unchanged and the same genial fellow as when he was a county clerk. We also had the pleasure of shaking hands with our friend, Thomas Walling, the abstractor, who is just the same as ever, only we noticed he was minus the moustache of former days. As we left town we saw George Farley on the streets and gave him the salute. Our trip home was made in a little less time than going over, allowing for lost time in making a stop where Messrs. Reed and Taylor called concerning some business matters. In fact, the trip home was entirely too short, as the Ford carried us along up hill and down apparently at the same rate of speed, through the most beautiful and picturesque farming country imaginable. We passed by many farm homes which the writer remembers as lying in the native prairie grass only a few years ago or meagre little homesteads, with buildings not painted or even white-washed. In their stead now are fine groves and orchards, large houses and barns, well-painted and splendidly kept out-buildings, and besides all this were the evidences of the coming bumper crops growing on the rich land on every hand—the large fields of winter wheat and spring grain which is in excellent condition for this time of year. The farmers all seemed busy planting corn, evidently with the feeling that no time must be lost or the alfalfa harvest will be upon them before the corn planting is finished. Other beauties than these mentioned were the blossoms of the apple, cherry and peach trees and the air filled with their sweet fragrance. As we sped along enjoying all of these wondrous beauties, drinking in all the glories that Nature and man together were bringing to pass, the car suddenly pulled up in front of our place of business and we reluctantly alighted to take up our humble duties where dirty type and printer's ink and gaping copy books are the chief sights which delight (?) our eyes. Our trip seemed all a dream, but it was mightily enjoyed, as some dreams are, and we hope the good brothers will come again when our weight is needed as ballast on some trip.
