Many of the candidates in The Journal's Booster Campaign have quickly grasped the significance of the 5,000 vote offer which was announced Saturday night.

While the names of the disinterested ones are being removed from the list of nominations as fast as possible, new nominees are being added daily and more are sure to come.

The 5,000 extra votes for the first new subscription to The Daily Journal will be given in addition to the regular schedule of votes published.

On with the campaign! is the slogan of each of the districts and the interested ones will meet with great success in what they will find to be a delightful fascinating task.

even a brand new nominee. The contestants are finding out that the best and quickest way to find votes is by personal request of their friends to renew their subscription to The Daily or Semi-Weekly Journal; or if they are not taking the paper now, to join the big, contented family of our new readers.

Business men and others are still speaking laudably of what they consider a praiseworthy enterprise on the part of The Journal in offering such a splendid list of prizes.

Do you, dear reader, realize what the winning of one of the grand prizes means? Can you anticipate the pleasures and joy to be derived from an automobile at this time of year, when all nature is at its best.

When the statement made by The Journal that these, including the four district prizes, are to be free, it meant just what it said.

Votes and subscriptions are being received at The Journal office at any time. Every candidate or intending candidate is invited to call, phone or write the Campaign Manager on any question that they do not fully understand.
