LIBERSHALL, County Clerk. SOME FAKE NEWS FROM EUROPEAN BATTLEFIELDS American People Should Not Believe the News of Battle Before Reports Are Surely Correct. The tidings from the European battlefield, which cause the rejoicing of thousands of anti-Germans of our country, are, in nine parts out of ten, nothing but mere fabrications of the phantasy of French, Belgian and English reporters, who are engaged to keep the special war editors of the yellow press of our country busy day and night. The endless "extras" published in our big cities prove: Da ist kein Unsim noch so dumm, er findet doch sein Publicum. Let us examine these exact news for a minute before literary indigestion makes us unable to digest the news to come. On Wednesday, August 5 it was reported from London that there was a "great battle" on the North sea; the English beat the Germans, of course, how could it be otherwise? But a few hours later London reported again that it was no great battle at all, but a very "unimportant" one, that is to say the English lost, and so it was very "unimportant." Twenty-four hours had passed and we were informed, via London, that the English cruiser Amphion was safe in an English harbor, while in fact it was destroyed, not by the steamer Koenigin Louise, but by a small excursion boat of the same name. The Parisian triumphed because the two German cruisers, Goeben and Breslau, were caught by the French, while all the world knows that these cruisers are in the Adriatic sea. In big letters, our dailies announced the death of 25,000 Germans at the battle of Liege, while it is officially stated that 2,000 brave soldiers had lost their lives. These fabrications could be augmented ad infinitum. No wonder the World-Herald of our metropolis commends the war news by a very significant sentence: "It must be noted that all the war news is coming from the English, French and Belgian sources—and what kind of sources are they?" The grand old Bismark once insulted the late Queen Victoria of England very much by saying he wouldn't give the bones of one Pomerian soldier for the word of an English premier minister; and the old Reichs-Kanzler was certainly right saying about the French war news of 1870: Gelogen wie Telegraphier! What would he have said about some of the American war editorials? H. Steger. Annual PRATERNA PICNIC at Weeping Water, Thursday AUGUST 27. A day of good, wholesome enjoyment is promised. Weeping Water wants you to enjoy it with her. William Chassot of Pocasset, Oklahoma, is in the city, coming up from his southern home for a visit at the home of Mrs. P. C. Hanson and family. He is greatly pleased with his location, but likes to visit the old home here occasionally to renew acquaintance with his friends.

THE COUNTY JAIL COMPLETED AND IS IN READINESS County Commissioners Inspect the Building and Are Remarkably Well Pleas'd. The new county jail has been completed and yesterday the board of county commissioners inspected the building and they were mightily well pleased with the fine building that Contractor Larson has turned over to them at the outlay of what seems a very small sum when one looks over the new jail building. There are few counties in the state that will be able to boast of a newer or more up-to-date structure and its equipment will meet with the regulations in regard to fire protection. The building is of handsome red hard finished brick, which is set off nicely with trimmings of white stone that makes a very neat appearance. The main entrance of the jail is on Fourth street, where the steps lead up to the handsome doorway in the center of the first floor of the building. Here one enters the vestibule of the building, which is finished in yellow hard pine and cherry, making a neat appearance with the hardwood floors and general note of cleanliness and tastefulness. From the vestibule there are two doors, one leading into the office of the sheriff, which is located on the south side of the building in a bright, sunny room of ample size, while another door admits into the residence part of the jail that will be occupied by Sheriff Quinton and family. In the living apartments of the sheriff there is some mighty fine carpenter work, of which the contractor may well feel justly proud. The stairway leading to the second floor is of yellow pine and heavy dark oak, that makes a very pretty combination, and the panelling on the stairway, together with the banister, makes it one of the most attractive pieces of work on the entire building. On the first floor of the building, besides the sheriff's office, there is a parlor, dining room and kitchen for the use of the sheriff or jailor, all of which is equipped with the most modern arrangements, and the woodwork is the same as in the office, that of yellow pine and cherry, with handsome hardwood floors. In the kitchen a pantry has been placed that has all the cabinets and places for provisions that could be desired. From this room there has been made a dumb waiter, where the food for the prisoners can be passed out into the entryway to the cell room and allows the prisoners to receive their meals without inconvenience to the members of the jailor's family. A door leads from the kitchen to the entryway from the steel stairway on the south side of the building that will be used for the transfer of prisoners to and from the jail, and this is the only means of communication between the two sections of the building and insures the family residing there freedom from annoyance from the where provisions can be stored for use. Here also is a small closet made of brick and steel, where the garments of the prisoners can be thoroughly fumigated and cleaned without the odor penetrating through the building. Taken as a whole the building is a beauty and a credit to Cass county and its progressive people, and the contractor has certainly delivered a good job on the contract for the erection of the building and the workmen engaged on the job have completed it without a flaw in the construction.

Are Married at Lincoln. At Lincoln yesterday afternoon John J. Becker of Alvo and Miss May M. Creamer of Eagle, this county, were united in the bonds of matrimony by County Judge Risser of Lancaster county. The bridal couple were accompanied by some twenty of their relatives and friends to be present on the very happy occasion. Both of the contracting parties are well known in the western portion of the county, where their friends are legion, and upon the wedding they will receive the heartiest best wishes of their friends. W. S. Smith of Murray was in the city today for a few hours en route from his home to Omaha, where he was called to look after some matters of business for the day. Letter files at the Journal office.
