The Prison-House of Death.

The prison referred to in the parable turns from sin, accepting Christ as is undoubtedly the great prison-house of death, into which approximately This does not mean, however, that | twenty thousand millions already have justice will be ignored. In the case of gone. All these are to come forth, not the Church, the sins of youth often all at once, but "every man in his own leave their scar and sting to the end order," as the Scriptures declare. Only the Church will be in the First Resurrection. During the Millennium the awakening from the sleep of deuth world in just the same manner. > While the blessing of the Lord will provide an abundance for all, nevertheless we may safely assume that the provision will be in the hands of their fellows. It will be the sheep that will be especially interested in those in the great prison-house of death, and who will be praying for them and preparing for them. By so engaging their time and energy these sheep will be manifesting a purpose, a will, in harmony with that of the Creator. God has willed that all in the graves shall come forth at the command of the Lord-Jesus; and those in harmony with God and Christ will be co-laborers with God in accomplishing the work for which Christ died. Whoever is not interested in that work will be lacking in God's Spirit; and this is exactly what is harged against the goat class.

The King, having redeemed the world of mankind and having provided for the resurrection of all the redeemed, counts them as in a certain sense representing Himself, as He says in the parable. His reproof to the goat class indicates that they were not really interested in the things of God. Their interest was merely a selfish one. They had more or less of the spirit of selfishness, which is the spirit of Satan.

The Lord's provision, as the Apostle points out, is, "The gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord."
