A few were awakened in olden times, merely to relapse into death again. It was not possible that any could be fully recovered from the power of death until Christ first had provided the Redemption-price on man's behalf. God speaks of things from this viewpoint. Looking down from the beginning. He tells us that He had provided Jesus as "the Lamb of God" in His purpose before the foundation of the world. Hence, in speaking to Moses, He did not speak of the world as being dead in the sense of dead brute beasts, but as those who have hope. He spoke of the things not yet accounplished as though they had already been accomplished, and declared Himself the God of Abraham, Isaac and Jacob, who were dead, but for whom a resurrection had been provided.
