HOME, SWEET HOME.

When I was a babe at mother's knee, I was happy and free from harm; Twas there I spent my happy days, knew no cares of the world, No troubles could I see;

But naturally then, as I grew up, My thoughts began to roam;

Of what they chanced to see; The more I heard, the more I thought;

Twas then my mind would wander, No pleasures could I see; Home, Sweet Home, no longer Seemed what it used to be; The world was full of pleasures, In the city they were free;

Sometimes in youth you'll wander,
