CHAPTER XVII.

Peg and the Chickester Family. Peg finally weakened under Mr. Hawkes' powers of persuasion. Putting Michael on the head, she said to the footman: 'Ye won't hurt him, will ye? Michael at that stage kicked her hand and whined, as though he knew they were to be separated. Peg comforted him and went on: 'An' I'd be much obliged to ye if ye'd give him some wather an' a bone. He loves mutton bones.' Peg looked down and found Alaric sitting at a desk near the door staring at her in disgust. He was such a funny looking little fellow to Peg that she could not feel any resentment toward him. His sleek well brushed hair; his carefully creased and admirably cut clothes, his self-sufficiency and, above all, his absolute assurance that whatever he did was right amused Peg immensely. He was an entirely new type of young man to her, and she was interested. She smiled at him now in a friendly way and said: 'Ye must know Michael is simply crazy about mutton. He loves mutton.'

'Where's her husband?' Ethel sprang to her feet. She was to be disgraced before her family by that beggar boy. Mrs. Chickester said in astonishment, 'Her husband?' 'Yes,' replied Peg insistently. 'I saw her husband when I came in here first. I've been in this room before, ye know. I came in through those windows, an' I saw her an' her husband. She was—' 'What in heaven's name does she mean?' cried Alaric. Peg persisted, 'I tell ye it was she sent me to the kitchen—she an' him.' 'Him? Who in the world does she mean?' from Alaric. 'To whom does she refer, Ethel?' from Mrs. Chickester. 'Mr. Brent,' said Ethel with admirable self control. She was on thin ice, but she must keep calm. Mrs. Chickester looked relieved. Peg went on: 'Sure, she thought I was a servant looking for a place, an' Mr. Hawkes told me not to say a word until he came—an' I didn't say a word.' Mr. Hawkes now broke in: 'My time is short, Miss O'Connell, it was your uncle's wish that you should make your home here with Mrs. Chickester. She will give you every possible advantage to make you a happy, well cared for, charming young lady.'

The Butler Took Michael; Peg Asked Him Not to Hurt the Dog.

'Come here!' called Mrs. Chickester. Peg walked over to her, and when she got almost beside the old lady she turned to have another glimpse at Alaric and gave him a little, chuckling good natured laugh. 'Look at me!' commanded Mrs. Chickester sternly. 'Yes, ma'am,' replied Peg with a little courtesy. Mrs. Chickester closed her eyes for a moment. What was to be done with this barbarian? Why should this affliction be thrust upon her? Then she thought of the thousand pounds a year. She opened her eyes and looked severely at Peg. 'Don't call me 'ma'am,' she said. 'No, ma'am,' replied Peg nervously, then instantly corrected herself. 'No, an't, No, an't.' 'Aunt!' said Mrs. Chickester laughingly. 'Aunt, not an't.' Alaric commented to Ethel: 'An't! Like some little crawly in ect.' Peg heard him, looked at him and laughed. He certainly was odd. Then she looked at Ethel, then at Mr. Hawkes, then all around the room, as if she missed some one. Finally she faced Mrs. Chickester again. 'Are you me Uncle Nat's widdy?' 'No, I am not,' contradicted the old lady sharply. 'Then how are you me-aunt?' demanded Peg. 'I am your mother's sister,' replied Mrs. Chickester. 'Oh!' cried Peg. 'Then your name's Monica?' 'It is.'

call and find out what progress you're making. And now I must take my leave.' He picked up his hat and came from the table. Peg sprang up breathlessly and frightenedly. Now that Mr. Hawkes was going she felt deserted. He had at least been gentle and considerate to her. She tugged at his sleeve and looked straight up into his face with her big blue eyes wide open and pleaded: 'Please, sir, take me with ye an send me back to New York. I'd rather go home. I'dade I would. I don't want to be a lady. I want me father. Please take me with ye.'

'Oh, come, come'— Mr. Hawkes began. 'I want to go back to me father. I'dade I do.' Her eyes filled with tears. 'He mightn't like me to stay here now that me uncle's dead.' 'Why, it was your uncle's last wish that you should come here. Your father will be delighted at your good fortune.' He gently pressed her back into the chair and smiled pleasantly and reassuringly down at her. Just when he had negotiated everything most satisfactorily to have Peg endeavor to upset it all was most disturbing. He went on again: 'Your aunt will do everything in her power to make you feel at home. Won't you, Mrs. Chickester?' 'Everything?' said Mrs. Chickester, as if she were walking over her own grave. Peg looked at her aunt ruefully (her expression was most forbidding); at Ethel's expressive back; lastly at Alaric fitting a cigarette into a gold mounted holder. Her whole nature cried out against them. She made one

IN PLATTSMOUTH FORTY YEARS AGO.

Hon. O. P. Mason will speak in this town Saturday evening next, on the public questions of the day. Louisville is improving rapidly. Three new stores are under way, and will be finished and occupied before snow flies. The veritable 'Old Crook-leg Cal. Stewart,' from the mouth of Weeping Water, was in town Saturday, taking hash at the Saunders House.

Work on the machine shop grounds is progressing rapidly. The company are now delivering stone for the foundations, which were commenced on Tuesday. T. M. Bobbitt of Tipton precinct brought a sample each of large yellow, white and calico corn and samples of sweet corn and popcorn, not injured. He says the crop is good.

J. M. Brantner was thrown from a horse last Wednesday and had two ribs broken. On Tuesday he was suffering severely and it was thought the termination might be fatal. Our old friend, Frank Stadter, has settled down to business again. A fact we discovered by a short visit to his studio in Mr. Stadelmann's building. He will tell you about it next week.

Mr. Gyger says he is painting a new Lutheran church, about three miles south of Louisville, on the Eight Mile Grove and Greenwood road. He also says it will be ready for dedication the first Sunday in September, and that all German friends are cordially invited to be present on that occasion.

We thought we knew something about thirteen-year-old girls, but Ben Hemple beats us all. His daughter, 13 years old, is a good musician, has made some very fine hair work pieces, all of which can be seen and heard by calling on Ben at the old 'Oyster House.'

M. McElwain is the man, happy—happy is no name for it—he smiles all over, clear down to his boots. It happened one day last week, the 20th, Mrs. M. is happy, too, and who would not be with a pretty new Centennial daughter in the house, to make music all the happy Christmas time?

In Memoriam.—Robert Wilburn, who died at his residence January 1, 1877, from paralysis of the brain and heart, was one of Cass county's most reliable and venerable citizens. He was born in Kentucky on the 11th of August, 1815. He was taken from there at an early age to Sangamon county, Illinois, and settled near where Springfield now stands, in the year 1818. He was a friend and intimate acquaintance of the venerable Peter Cartwright; also a neighbor and associate of the long-to-be-remembered Abraham Lincoln, president of the U. S. He accumulated a handsome estate there, and in the year 1872 he disposed of his property there and moved to Nebraska on account of ill-health in his family, which he hoped to improve by a change of climate, and settled in Cass county, near Greenwood. He was a man of the most honest principles, eminent piety and sterling integrity. He carried his religion into practice in every-day life; was a faithful friend, a loving husband and venerable father. He was formerly a member of the Baptist church, but finding no church of his choice near enough so that he could attend regularly, he attached himself to the Christian church at Greenwood. He was stricken down on Thursday, December 28th, about 3 o'clock p. m., and after three days of patient suffering without a murmur or sight of discontent, he passed peacefully away just as the sun arose on the first day of January, 1877, to receive his happy New Year's greeting by the blessed angels in the home of the blest. His funeral sermon was preached on Tuesday, January 2, by Rev. J. Henry White of the Baptist church, Wahoo, Neb., from Job 11:15-17. The grief-stricken family have the sympathies of all who know them, while the community and church realize that they have lost a useful citizen and exemplary Christian.

IN PLATTSMOUTH FORTY YEARS AGO.

Mrs. Jonathan Wise was attacked a day or two since with pneumonia and is seriously and dangerously ill. Mrs. Caroline Lambert, an old lady over 100 years old, was burned to death in Omaha Monday last. J. Chase, esq., of Weeping Water has leased a share of the mill formerly run by Messrs. Hubbard and Tewksbury, and will run it with Mr. Hubbard. They will undoubtedly make a strong team and give satisfaction to their patrons.

Married at the residence of John Gilmore, in Mt. Pleasant precinct, Cass county, Nebraska, on the 13th inst., by A. N. Sullivan, justice of the peace, Mr. A. P. Cox to Mary E. Gilmore. The Hon. Joseph Gilmore, member elect to the next legislature, and one of the first members ever initiated in Masonic lodge A. F. & A. M., came in, seven miles, to the annual election of officers Friday night, and had the pleasure of being ready to help the boys put out the fire if that old chimney had busted. Mr. Gilmore is one of our staunch men, staunch every way, and will weigh with any man of the next house, we bet.

Mr. Abbott, lately proprietor of the Saunders House, gave the Masonic fraternity a very handsome supper on St. John's night. We believe everyone was satisfied, and moreover, we are all satisfied that Mr. Abbott has made one of the best landlords the hotel has had lately, and the citizens are sorry to see him leave, though not doubting that Mr. Gregory, the new incumbent, will fill the bill and become equally popular and enterprising. This is a tardy notice to both gentlemen, but the absence of the editor must be our excuse.

M. L. White, esq., of Omaha is in town today; he is connected with a company who start in a short time for the Black Hills. They will take along all the machinery for working up the ore and separating the valuable minerals contained in it. We just listened to a description of the company, the manner and nature for which it was formed, as we were going to press, and would give our readers a more extended notice of it if we had the time; suffice to say they evidently mean business, and go prepared to make it win.

The friends and neighbors of Hon. Joe Gilmore gave him a reception on Wednesday evening. A merry crowd gathered there. Somebody had bought all the oysters in town, and such an onslaught on bivalves was never known before. By the kindness of E. Parme, the Herald was spirited over there, and all we have to say is, that when in the course of human events it becomes necessary for Joe Gilmore's friends to give him another oyster supper, we hope the Herald will be on hand. So does E. Parme, only we don't want to have to hold him again, to prevent him going back in the morning to get some more.

Mrs. Caroline Lambert, an old lady over 100 years old, was burned to death in Omaha Monday last. J. Chase, esq., of Weeping Water has leased a share of the mill formerly run by Messrs. Hubbard and Tewksbury, and will run it with Mr. Hubbard. They will undoubtedly make a strong team and give satisfaction to their patrons.

Married at the residence of John Gilmore, in Mt. Pleasant precinct, Cass county, Nebraska, on the 13th inst., by A. N. Sullivan, justice of the peace, Mr. A. P. Cox to Mary E. Gilmore. The Hon. Joseph Gilmore, member elect to the next legislature, and one of the first members ever initiated in Masonic lodge A. F. & A. M., came in, seven miles, to the annual election of officers Friday night, and had the pleasure of being ready to help the boys put out the fire if that old chimney had busted. Mr. Gilmore is one of our staunch men, staunch every way, and will weigh with any man of the next house, we bet.

Mr. Abbott, lately proprietor of the Saunders House, gave the Masonic fraternity a very handsome supper on St. John's night. We believe everyone was satisfied, and moreover, we are all satisfied that Mr. Abbott has made one of the best landlords the hotel has had lately, and the citizens are sorry to see him leave, though not doubting that Mr. Gregory, the new incumbent, will fill the bill and become equally popular and enterprising. This is a tardy notice to both gentlemen, but the absence of the editor must be our excuse.

M. L. White, esq., of Omaha is in town today; he is connected with a company who start in a short time for the Black Hills. They will take along all the machinery for working up the ore and separating the valuable minerals contained in it. We just listened to a description of the company, the manner and nature for which it was formed, as we were going to press, and would give our readers a more extended notice of it if we had the time; suffice to say they evidently mean business, and go prepared to make it win.

The friends and neighbors of Hon. Joe Gilmore gave him a reception on Wednesday evening. A merry crowd gathered there. Somebody had bought all the oysters in town, and such an onslaught on bivalves was never known before. By the kindness of E. Parme, the Herald was spirited over there, and all we have to say is, that when in the course of human events it becomes necessary for Joe Gilmore's friends to give him another oyster supper, we hope the Herald will be on hand. So does E. Parme, only we don't want to have to hold him again, to prevent him going back in the morning to get some more.
