CHAPTER XIX.

Peg went haphazardly around the room examining everything, sitting in various kinds of chairs, on the sofa, smelling the flowers, and wherever she went Jerry followed her at a little distance.

"Are you going to stay here?" "Mebbe I will and mebbe I won't." "Did your aunt send for you?" "No, me uncle—me Uncle Nat."

"Nathaniel Kingsnorth!" cried Jerry in amazement. "Sleepin' in his grave, poor man."

"I am. How did you know that?" "I was with your uncle when he died."

"Were ye?" "He told me all about you."

"I'd be more than proud if you'd look on me as your friend."

"I can see that," said Peg candidly. "I mean what do ye do?" "Everything a little and nothing really well," Jerry replied.

"When the strangeness wears off you'll be very happy. You're among friends."

"I'm glad you look at it so broad minded," said Jerry. "She stood restlessly a moment, her hands beating each other alternately."

"I can see that," said Peg candidly. "I mean what do ye do?" "Everything a little and nothing really well," Jerry replied.

with me father in a cart. An' the police an' the constabulary used to follow us about. They were very frightened of me father, they were. They were grand days for me. Ye're English, mebbe?" she asked him suddenly.

"Well, sure that's not your fault. Ye couldn't help it. No one should hold that against ye. We can't all be born Irish."

"I'm glad you look at it so broad minded," said Jerry. "She stood restlessly a moment, her hands beating each other alternately."

KING OF ITALY IS AT THE FRONT

Victor Emmanuel Takes Supreme Command of Army and Navy.

ADVANCE ON TOWARD TRIESTE

Austrian War Office Admits Soldiers of Enemy Have Entered Condrino, In Tyrol—Teutons Continue to Roll Russians Back.

WAR SUMMARY

The Italians, who have crossed the Austrian frontier toward the Isonzo river, have not yet met with any serious opposition. In fact, no important battle is expected until the invaders reach the river, as it is here the Austrians are established.

Successful progress still continues in the Galician district near Przemysl, according to Vienna, with the capture of additional men, guns and war material.

An engagement of extreme violence in progress north of Arras, where the Germans are trying to retake captured positions, and a similar condition prevails at the northern outskirts of the wood north of the road from Aix-les-Bains to Souchez where the French report a slight advance.

The British are reported by Paris to have made a fresh advance near La Bassée.

The alleged torpedoing of the American steamship Nebraska is featured by all the London papers, which described the incident as "an other challenge to America."

London, May 27.—The king of Italy has taken supreme command of the army and navy and is now with his troops at the front. On the Austro-Italian frontier, and for a few miles in Austrian territory the Italian lines stretch for a distance of fifty miles or more.

The Austrian war office admits that Italian troops have entered Condrino in the Tyrol, about forty miles east of Rovereto, where prior to the declaration of war, an Austrian barracks was blown up and many Italians were arrested.

At the same time Vienna claims that the Italian attacks on the Corinthian frontier were repulsed with considerable losses to the invaders, and that in an engagement across the border north of Udine the Italians fled, leaving their arms behind.

WOODS THAT SINK.

There Are Many Varieties That Will Not Float in Water.

That wood floats is such a common place fact in our lives that we hardly give it any thought. If we lived in tropical climates we would learn to distinguish between woods that float and woods that do not float. Many of the woods of Mexico and North America are so heavy even when perfectly dry that they will sink in water, notably lignum vitae, which is the wood commonly used for bowing balls.

Among our common native woods there are several that will not float when green. The cypress of the south is often girdled a year before it is cut so that it will die and dry while standing, thus making it possible to float the logs to the mill.

The reason why some woods float is not because the substance of which they are made is lighter than water, but because the cavities in the cells are so large that the air in them keeps up the wood. The material recalcitrant which composes the greater part of the cell wall is heavier than water, so that if the air in the cells is replaced by water the wood will sink. This is just what happens to wood which has been in water for a long time and has become "waterlogged."

It is the large water content of the heartwood of freshly felled oaks and hickories and of the sapwood of certain conifers that causes these woods to sink, for when dry they will float.

Lignum vitae and other heavy tropical woods, even when dry, sink because some of the cell cavities are so small compared to the thick cell walls that the air in the cavities is not enough to float the wood.

RAISULI STARTS REVOLT

Moorish Brigand Causing Trouble For French in Morocco.

Paris, May 28.—Official information from Morocco indicates that Raisuli, the Moorish brigand and pretender to Morocco's throne, is conducting an agitation among the natives in the district of Chaou, in the northern part of the country. It is stated that Raisuli's actions have been inspired by German agents.

General Lyantey, resident French governor of Morocco, dispatched a detachment of troops against the malcontents. The troops were attacked near Boudouma, eight miles south of Quezzan, by a strong force of mountaineers, coming from the Spanish zone. The mountaineers were defeated with heavy losses.
