

UNION MEETING OF YOUNG PEOPLE'S SOCIETIES

The Attendance Quite Large and Great Interest Manifested in the Deliberations.

From Wednesday's Daily. The union meeting of the Young People's societies of the city at the Christian church Sunday proved a great success. The weather was rather damp and cool, and the meeting was held inside, instead of on the lawn. The church was tastefully decorated with flags, which made a good setting for the speakers, whose themes were all more or less of a patriotic nature.

Philip Rhin, who is president of the Y. P. S. C. E. of the Christian church, was leader, and E. H. Westcott presided at the piano and the music was assuredly good. A number of appropriate hymns were had at the opening of the meeting, followed by a special number by Don C. York, "The Ninety and Nine."

The invocation was by P. F. Rhin, after which followed the address of M. S. Briggs on "The Safety and Perpetuity of Our Country." He spoke of the rise and fall of nations, the causes for their springing into existence, their growth, their decline, their fall, saying in brief, that the country was safe as long as the people were alert to the principles of right and justice, with a school house on every hilltop. The essential thing was "right thinking," which would impel right living. Not hard times and hard work were the enemies of a nation, but riches and idleness.

C. E. Whitaker followed, and spoke of the relation of this country, which should be at peace with all nations. In his discourse he found it to the point to use a portion of the address of President Wilson when he addressed the foreign-born Americans a short time since, and in using this portion of the speech he also paid a high compliment to the president, in what he said that in after years the words which he had spoken would team with significance and of truth, which would be a watchword to the generations yet unborn.

Thomas Wines made a very impressive prayer for the president of the United States, in which he asked that Divine guidance be given him that he might direct the affairs of this government in the channels of peace and prosperity.

"At Peace With all Peoples" was the theme which Clarence Stenner spoke to and in his address he said there were two things which were required to effect this end, one was to observe that portion of the Lord's prayer which asks forgiveness only as we give, and that we obey that injunction to love each other as our own selves. If all people would obey these there would be universal peace.

Postmaster D. C. Morgan followed with the topic of the promotion by the church of national ideals. He said he could in the time only touch on one, which was peace, and discussed it at some length.

In answer to the question asked her by a drunken loafer, "What does a woman know about war?" said: "What does not a woman know about war when she is a mother who has reared an innocent babe from the cradle, seen him grow to boyhood, then to manhood, only to be called away and returned in a short time a corpse, who has put her very life into the boy, who has now grown to manhood, if she did not know about war who would?"

W. R. Bryan offered a prayer for the peace of the warring nations and that our own beloved country should always be the advocate for peace.

Mrs. Minnie Rhin spoke to the question, "Watching Over the Souls of Our Associates." The strong point she made was that in order to do this we must keep our lives right.

George L. Farley followed with a treatise of the watchman, his duties, his qualifications, and the watchman who was waiting for the king should be busy all the time, and not with folded, idle hands.

The meeting was closed by the congregation singing "America," and pronouncing of the benediction by Rev. F. M. Druliner.

A VERY PLEASANT FAMILY REUNION LAST MONDAY

From Wednesday's Daily. A very pleasant family reunion was held Monday at the home of E. C. Hill in honor of his sister, Mrs. A. B. Smith and family, of Evanston, Illinois. The mother, Mrs. Thomas Hill, of Lincoln, and sister, Mrs. W. W. Glenn and family, of Wymore, were present. The Smith family motored through from Chicago last week, taking their departure early Tuesday morning for their home.

SELECTION OF TEACHERS FOR ENSUING TERM

Board of Education Meets to Take Up Matters of Importance and Resolve to Improve School Grounds.

From Wednesday's Daily. The Plattsmouth board of education held their regular monthly meeting last evening and took up some very pressing matters in regard to the preparing of the school buildings and grounds for the coming year. One of the chief matters taken up by the board was that of having a concrete retaining wall constructed along the south side of the grounds of the Central and High school buildings, which will do away with what for the past few years has been quite an annoyance to that section of the city, as the dirt has constantly been crumbling off and falling on the sidewalk, making it muddy and disagreeable in stormy weather and also presenting a most unattractive appearance.

The assignment of teachers of the city schools has also been given out by Superintendent W. G. Brooks as follows:

High School—A. O. Egenberger, history and athletics; Lucille Gass, English; Ruth Moore, science; Estelle Baird, German and Latin; Margaret Gibberson, normal training; Anna Daniel, mathematics.

Central Building—Departmental, Elmer Frans, arithmetic and history; Anna Heisel, grammar, writing and spelling; Mae Morgan, reading, art, music, high school music; Pearl Staats, geography, physiology, spelling; Teresa Hemple, sixth grade; Goldie Noble, fifth and sixth grades; Clara Weyrich, fifth grade; Verna Cole, fourth grade; Claire Bookmeyer, third and fourth grades; Elizabeth Kerr, second and third grades; Amelia Martens, "C" and first grades.

Columbian Building—Nettie Hawksworth, principal, fifth and sixth grades; Vesta Douglass, fourth and fifth grades; Alpha Peterson, second and third grades; Hazel Dovey, "C" and first grades.

East Fourth Ward—Delia Tartsch, principal, third and fourth grades; Anna Rys, "C", first and second grades.

West Second Ward—Marie Svoboda, "C", first and second grades.

Mercerville—Rose Prahaska, "C", first, second, third and fourth grades. Ellen Windham, art supervisor. Marie Kaufmann, penmanship supervisor.

OUTING OF RETAIL MERCHANTS AT CARTER LAKE AUGUST 2-8

From Wednesday's Daily. The outing of the Nebraska Retailers at Carter Lake, Omaha, August 2 to 8, is being looked forward to with much pleasure by the merchants throughout the state. This occasion will be six days of good fellowship, rest and recreation for the retail dealers in all lines of trade. There will be sectional meetings every morning to talk over the different lines of trade and business problems. Arrangements will be made by a large majority of the merchants to be in attendance at the lake during the week and take part in the meetings, as well as to bring their families and enjoy the week's outing by the pretty little lake.

SEARCHING FOR INDIAN RELICS IN CASS COUNTY

Harvard University Representatives Here for Purpose of Researches for Indian Villages Buried.

From Wednesday's Daily. There has been a great deal of interest created in scientific circles over the finding in Cass county of many buried Indian villages, as well as the tools and implements used by the ancient people who settled this section of the west, and numerous parties have conducted investigations along these lines with the result of securing much valuable information as to the early tribes of Indians who made their homes along the Missouri Valley.

Saturday Prof. Sterns of Harvard university, together with a party of assistants, arrived to undertake the work of searching out a few of these buried villages in the hope that something of greater value to the store of knowledge of the early inhabitants might be elarned. The party went to Nehawka from here and will put in several days there in investigating the traces that have been found of the Indian tribes that formerly roamed over the locality. There has been several mounds discovered there which have turned out to have been the marks of ancient Indian villages, and several stone implements and vessels have been unearthed that are prized very highly by the scientific world as representative of a race long vanished. The party from Harvard will also visit in the vicinity of Rock Bluffs, where the hills are rich with old relics of the long ago.

Dr. G. H. Gilmore of Murray has become quite interested in the matter of securing data on the early residents of Nebraska and has made several important finds near Rock Bluffs which will be further looked into by the scientific research party. On one of the hills near that place a large mound has been located which as yet has not been explored, and this will be opened by the Harvard party that will be there Wednesday to start in on their work.

The result of the visit of the eastern party here will be watched with interest and their work will probably result in uncovering many interesting facts in relation to the Indians who inhabited this section of the state.

TWO SPECIAL TRAINS OF SHRINERS PASS THROUGH HERE

From Wednesday's Daily. Sunday afternoon two special trains were sent north over the Missouri Pacific containing members of the Nobles of the Mystic Shrine bound for their conclave at Seattle, Washington, to which the eyes of all Shriners are now turned throughout the United States. The trains carried members of the Kansas and Missouri delegations and were filled by an enthusiastic bunch of the members of the Shrine. The special of the Kansas delegation was decorated with all the emblems, as well as a number of scenes from the experiences of the Shriners and was most noticeable. The locomotive was equipped with a siren whistle which awoke the echoes as the train sped through the city on into Omaha, from where it will be transferred to the Northwest and Northern Pacific to be sent to Seattle.

THE GEORGE W. GARRISON ESTATE IS IN COURT AGAIN

The George W. Garrison estate, which has been the subject of more or less litigation in the past was again brought in the limelight in the district court, when the case of Mrs. Nancy J. Garrison vs. Alonza Garrison, et al, was brought to trial before Judge Begley. This case is one involving the land belonging to the late George W. Garrison and which was decided to his three children in 1899. The land is quite valuable and the interest in the suit is very keen. The deeds made by Mr. Garrison in 1899 were not recorded until after his death, when they were placed on record, and now the widow seeks to have them placed back in the estate for division among the different heirs. Matthew Gering appears in the case for Mrs. Garrison, while Attorney C. A. Rawls is the representative of the defendants.

THE GREATEST CARNIVAL COMPANY OF THE PRESENT TIMES

But few carnival organizations is as complete as is the S. W. Brundage Shows which are to open a week's engagement in Plattsmouth, beginning Monday, July 12th. Mr. Brundage has spared neither quality or expense in making his attractions among the very best on the road, and judging from the praise which has been given the shows wherever they have exhibited, he has accomplished his purpose.

In Leon W. Marshall's famous "Happy Days in Dixieland," Mr. Brundage presents an attraction which has been declared one of the finest touring the country with a carnival organization. Mr. Marshall is one of the prominent minstrel leaders of the south and is touring the north for the first time. Thirty-five high-class minstrel performers are members of this one attraction.

"The Miracle," the show beautiful, is an attraction which will prove pleasing, especially to the women and children. It is one of the most expensive carnival productions ever staged and has been a sensation wherever the shows have played. The famous painting, "The Shadow of the Cross," which has raised so much comment at the various expositions, is a part of this exhibition.

The racing motordome, upon which prominent motorcycle racers speed, is one of the most sensational attractions offered. It is claimed to be the largest on the road, and many thrills and daring "stunts" are promised Plattsmouth speed fans. The other Brundage attractions are right up to the minute and in the entire show Plattsmouth residents are promised the most complete carnival company which has ever visited the city.

C. F. West of Portland, Maine, president of the Plattsmouth Water company, arrived in the city this morning to inspect the plant here and look over some contemplated improvements that will be made at the pumping station.

A GOOD MAN GOES TO HIS LONG REST

Frank W. Brown, Than Whom No Better Citizen Ever Lived, Has Passed to His Reward.

The following account of the death of a grand, good man, whose friends are legion all over Nebraska, is taken from the Lincoln Star of Wednesday:

Postmaster Francis W. Brown, twice mayor of Lincoln and widely known in democratic politics of Nebraska, died at 9:25 this morning at the Lincoln hotel after an illness of several weeks' duration of a complication of diseases. In the death of Mr. Brown, Lincoln lost one who has been prominently identified with the development of Lincoln from the early days.

Mr. Brown took charge of the post-office last November and continued in active charge until four weeks ago, when he was forced to take to his bed. His condition gradually grew worse until hope for his recovery was abandoned yesterday. Mr. Brown was 61 years of age.

Mrs. Brown and Frank W. Brown, jr., of Kearney, were at Mr. Brown's bedside when death came.

Francis Wyatt Brown was born in Booneville, Mo., June 16, 1854, where his father was engaged in the mercantile and banking business for many years. The family later moved to Jacksonville, Ill., and while living there Mr. Brown returned to Booneville and attended Kemper military academy. He was later a student at Illinois college, at which time he made the acquaintance of W. J. Bryan, who was then a student at the college. This acquaintance soon ripened into a friendship, which has been particularly close throughout all the years, Mr. Bryan having studied law in the office of Mr. Brown's older brother, later removed to Chicago and then to Nebraska about the same time that Mr. Brown did.

Mr. Brown came to Nebraska in the early eighties, when he located at Omaha, as vice president of the Henry & Coatsworth Lumber company, who at that time had a yard in Lincoln. Several years later he moved here, making this his permanent home in 1892. He has been engaged in the lumber business in this city ever since.

In 1897 Mr. Brown was elected as excise man, serving on the board with A. H. Weir as mayor, and was then re-elected during the F. A. Graham administration. He was elected mayor in 1905 and re-elected in 1907, defeating A. H. Hutton both times.

During the campaign of 1908 he was particularly active in behalf of Mr. Bryan and was the member of the resolutions committee from Nebraska at the democratic convention which nominated Mr. Bryan, and as such shaped the platform according to Mr. Bryan's wishes. Although not a delegate to the Baltimore convention in 1912, Mr. Brown was a prominent figure, and it was related by those who were present at that convention that much of the credit for Mr. Wilson's nomination was due to the quiet efforts of Mr. Brown to handle the situation.

Perhaps no one has ever served as mayor of Lincoln who accomplished as much in the way of municipal improvement and ever left office with as many friends as he did. He was the founder of Antelope park and it was through his efforts that such a substantial start was made, and he probably placed the park above all other of his accomplishments in his affection.

In 1906 he was the democratic nominee for congress, running against E. M. Pollard, who defeated him in the Nebraska district after a sharp battle. He has been a figure at democratic conventions for years, and it is said that no one has ever wielded the influence before the legislature that he has. This influence was founded largely on the knowledge that all had that F. W. Brown would not be for anything that he did not believe was for the benefit of the people of Nebraska. He was called upon innumerable times to wield his influence toward the passage of constructive legislation.

When Mr. Wilson was elected as president, it was said that Mr. Brown would be given some high position of trust. A number of offices were suggested to him, and had it not been for his desire to stay in Lincoln, he would probably have been appointed to some diplomatic position under this administration. When he expressed his desire to be postmaster at Lincoln, he had allied with him the Bryan influence, which finally resulted in his taking over the office on the 16th of November, 1914. In spite of his rather indisposed condition at that time, he took hold of the affairs of the office with his old-time business acumen, and up to the time of his last illness was active in planning and carrying out the work at the postoffice.

Probably no man in Nebraska had more personal friends than Mr. Brown. His efforts to do something for his friends was his main characteristic, and much of the time that he might have spent in his own selfish pursuits was given to an effort for his friends.

For a number of years Mr. Brown has been mentioned as the democratic candidate for both governor and United States senator, but he has always said that he could not afford to run for either office.

He was married December 22, 1880, to Jennie Bennett of Omaha. Two sons were born to the union, one of whom died February 2, 1899; the other, F. W. Brown, jr., is at present editor of the Kearney Morning Times at Kearney, Neb. Three sisters and one brother, Mrs. William Beiler, of Philadelphia, Mrs. James Smith, of Berlin, Ill., and Mrs. Franklin Houston, of Kansas City, Mo., and W. A. Brown of Memphis, Tenn., are those surviving. Mr. Brown came from a family notable both in Virginia and Kentucky, many members of which have held high rank in the way of public office in the states of Maryland, Virginia, Mississippi and Kentucky.

He was a member of the Elks' club. The family home is located at Twentieth and Washington streets, but Mr. and Mrs. Brown have made their home at the Lincoln hotel for some time.
