RELIGIOUS CENSUS IN OMAHA

More Than One Thousand Workers Take Count of Various Beliefs.
Omaha, Aug. 26.—More than 1,000 workers, the majority of whom are women, took the religious census of Omaha. It was a part of the Billy Sunday campaign.

Several workers reported doors slammed in their faces by irate men and women, who told them "it was none of your business which church I attend, if any." Others reported having met with uniform courtesy.

One church worker was appalled to know how few of her neighbors were church members.
"I don't ask my roomers what their religious convictions are," was the reply of many women keeping rooming houses to queries regarding the affiliations of those in their homes.

To be locked in one of the first homes which she visited in taking the census and threatened with personal violence was the fate of Miss Avonol Stickleby, high school student, one of the youngest workers engaged in the work. She was released by a police man.

Horse With Glanders Killed.
Beatrice, Neb., Aug. 26.—State Veterinarian Anderson of Lincoln and Dr. J. T. # INDEPENDENT COAL CO.

Plattsmouth, Nebraska

During the past few weeks there seems to have been a great demand for another coal company in Plattsmouth, and at the request of a large number of people I have consented to handle coal in the future. My sheds will soon be under construction, and I have both hard and soft coal on the road, and will be prepared to take care and make prompt deliveries on all orders for the winter upon arrival of these shipments.

Our business will be conducted on a cash basis, but reasonable discounts will be allowed on such basis of doing business. We will be pleased to receive your order as early as possible, and we can take care of it upon arrival of first shipment.
