

W. R. C. ENTER-TAINED AT THOMAS WILES HOME

From Wednesday's Daily.

Yesterday afternoon some forty members of the Woman's Relief Corps and friends, and a number of the members of the G. A. R. wended their way to the pretty home of Mr. and Mrs. Thomas Wiles, where the regular monthly social meeting of the W. R. C. was to be held, with Mesdames J. R. Lee, H. C. VanHorn and Wiles as the hostesses. Those fortunate enough to be present declare them to be most excellent entertainers. All anticipate a royal time whenever invited to the Wiles home, as Mrs. Wiles and her assistant hostesses usually devote a great deal of their time to the planning and preparation, and this can surely be said of the W. R. C. social meeting held yesterday afternoon. A portion of the afternoon was devoted to a number of games and contests which the hostesses had planned and prepared for the entertainment of their guests. These games and contests were entered into with much interest and enthusiasm and afforded the guests much pleasure. As stated before, a number of the members of the G. A. R. were present, and a number of the old army songs were sung by the entire company, which were very much enjoyed by all. For the occasion the parlors of the Wiles home had been very prettily decorated with a generous use of small flags. The hostesses had prepared a regular dinner, and at a convenient time this was served in cafeteria style. It was a most delicious dinner and most thoroughly relished and appreciated by the guests.

SERIOUS FIRE AT THE C. R. TODD HOME WEST OF PLATTSMOUTH

From Saturday's Daily.

Yesterday afternoon quite a serious fire occurred at the farm home of C. R. Todd, west of this city, which resulted in the destruction of a small barn on the farm, as well as the burning in quite a serious manner of their little 3-year-old son, Theodore. As far as can be learned the fire was caused by the use of matches by Fred, a 4-year-old son of Mr. and Mrs. Todd, who, with his little brother, had accompanied their mother out to gather up eggs, and the older boy secured some matches unknown to the mother and proceeded to light them, with the result that the hay was set on fire and the small barn burning quite rapidly. The mother missed Theodore and rushing to the burning building rescued him, but he had received quite serious burns on the left shoulder and arm, as well as on the face. There was nothing in the barn save hay and two sets of harness, as the horses had been turned out earlier in the day, and therefore escaped the fire, but the structure was burned to the ground. As soon as possible medical assistance was summoned for the injured boy and he was made as comfortable as possible, but is still suffering considerably from the injuries.

TOLD LITTLE BOY TO "SIT THERE FOR THE PRESENT"

From Wednesday's Daily.

An amusing story is told of one of the little folks attending the primary class of Miss Amelia Martens at the Central building, and which is well worth relating. It seems on the opening day of school a little lad arrived to start in on his education, and being a new pupil was led to a seat by the teacher, who told him, "You may sit here for the present." The little boy was perfect in his conduct that day and kept an eager eye on the teacher, and when school was dismissed returned home with a rather disappointed expression on his face, and when asked by his mother as to the cause replied: "The teacher told me to sit in a seat for the present, but did not give me the present." The little boy was then told there were presents and presents and the difference in what the teacher meant and his idea of her statement.

A "SCRAPPY" BALL GAME YESTERDAY

In Which the Red Sox Came Out Victorious, in the Presence of Over 1,000 People.

The booster base ball game yesterday drew out one of the largest crowds of the season, and the enthusiasm of the fans knew no bounds, as the attendance demonstrated, and early in the afternoon the crowd began to wend their way toward the ball park, and when the Burlington band, which had donated their services for the occasion, marched to the grounds the citizens in general, who had closed their offices and stores, followed and helped swell the crowd, which ranged from 1,000 to 1,200, and the rest room fund of the Commercial club will realize a neat sum as the result of the attendance.

The contest itself was one filled with feeling and much excitement as the Avoca allies proceeded to get busy and take a lead on the Sox, which was tied after great effort, and was finally won by the Red Sox team, when Louie Smith scored in the ninth inning on a blocked ball through the changing a ball by the Avoca twirler, Andrews, and the final result of the game was 2 to 1 in favor of the Sox. The game throughout was filled with rag chewing and several times the Avoca legions were off the grounds, first over the crowd making a demonstration, and secondly over the decisions of Umpire Waters in calling Fahrenstock out at the home plate in the sixth inning.

The game was a fine display of the pitching ability of the two mound artists, in which Hayes for the locals retired eleven of the allies through the strike-out route and did not give a pass to first, while Andrews, who came from Dodge, the home of Joe Stecker, for the game, whiffed eleven of the Sox, but walked four of the local lads, and one of these proved his undoing and tied the game up, as Huff, in the sixth, after being walked, was able to score on the scratch hit of Smith to first base.

In the opening Maseman hit a grounder to Parriott and was thrown out at first; Easton hit to left field safely; Fahrenstock struck out; Harmon retired through being hit by a batted ball. For the Sox, Beal led off and was hit by Andrews, was sacrificed to second by Parriott, who was out, Andrews to Maseman; Herold was out on a high fly to Fahrenstock, and Beal was put out while trying to steal third base.

In the second Ossenkop was struck out; Rains retired, Parriott to Craig, and Larson was out on a little grounder to Hayes. For the Red Sox, Mason started the hostilities by placing a safety through shortstop, and was sacrificed by Huff to second base; Parker struck out, and when Louie Smith was safe on an error at first it looked good for Mason to score, but he was unable to get in from the second sack in time and was held at third base, where he remained. Craig was walked, but Hayes ended the inning by a little grounder that Maseman handled, while Andrews covered first.

The third inning was an easy one for both sides, as the batters were put out in rapid succession. Gruber, who was on for the allies, was struck out by Hayes; Andrews was retired, Hays to Craig, and Maseman fell a victim to the slants of Mr. Hayes. Beal, leading off for the Sox, was walked, and was followed by Parriott, who attempted to bunt and was put out; Herold lifted a high fly to Fahrenstock at short and Mason struck out.

The fourth inning saw the visitors nail the first score of the game after Easton had been retired on a strike-out. Fahrenstock, the fast shortstop of the visitors, secured a safe hit over second base; Harmon struck out, but Fahrenstock had advanced around to third, and when Ossenkop hit to Parker and the ball was heaved wild to first base, Fahrenstock scored; Rains was hit by Hayes, but Larson retired the side by a hit to Huff at second. In the locals half of the inning there was nothing doing, as Huff, Parker and Smith were retired in order.

In the fifth Gruber was out on a fly to left garden that Mason secured; Andrews struck out and Maseman was out on a fly to third. Craig, the first man up for the locals, struck out; Hayes hit to first and was safe on an error; Beal placed one to Maseman which was grabbed, but Parriott secured a nice safe one over first base, but the side was retired when Herold was out, Andrews to Maseman.

The big sixth inning was the most thrilling of the game, as it was here that both sides exerted themselves to score, and the Sox annexed their run that made the game a tie. Easton was easy on a strikeout, but Fahrenstock again got busy and put one to Huff at second which was hard to handle and the runner was safe at first; Harmon was out on a fly to left garden, and Ossenkop hit to first, and Fahrenstock was called out at home when targeted by Herold on the throw of Craig. The Red Sox, with renewed vigor, proceeded to get busy, with the assistance of Andrews, the allies slab man, who was very generous to the locals in this inning. Mason was struck out; Huff was walked, as was also Parker; Louie Smith, by placing a safety to the first base territory, was able to score Huff; Craig was out on a fly to first base and Hayes was caught out on a foul to Rains. This inning served to cheer immensely the hopes of the locals for winning and the game was played with much more vim thereafter.

The seventh was short and sweet, Rains flying out to Smith in the right garden; Larson retired, Parker to Craig, and Gruber struck out. For the Red Sox, Beal, Parriott and Herold all retired through the strikeout route.

In the eighth there was not much doing, as both sides were not hitting heavily, as both Hayes and Andrews were working at their best. Andrews led off with a fly to Huff at second; Maseman hit a slow one to second that allowed him to annex first base safely, but it did him no good, as Easton struck out and Fahrenstock failed to deliver the needed hit and was retired at first on a grounder. For the Sox, Mason struck out; Huff was put out on a hit from Larson to Maseman; Parker struck out.

The last inning was the one that told the tale and brought down on the head of Umpire Waters the ire of the visitors in sustaining the action of the Sox in scoring when Andrews threw the ball he had been pitching with out of the diamond, when the umpire should retire the ball from play. For the allied forces, Harmon placed a nice drive to left field, which was dropped by Mason; Ossenkop struck out; Rains hit to third and was safe, as an attempt was made to nail Harmon at second, which failed; Larson was out on a little grounder to Andrews, and Harmon was nabbed trying to pilfer the third station, and Gruber ended the inning by a foul to Herold. In Plattsburgh's half of this inning Smith hit to Fahrenstock, who was not able to field the ball in time and the runner was safe at first; Craig advanced Smith to second on a sacrifice, and on a passed ball he reached third, where he was when Hayes, who was at bat, motioned him to score on the blocked ball play of Andrews, and with this run the game was declared in favor of the Red Sox.

SIoux CITY COUPLE MARRIED IN THIS CITY YESTERDAY

Yesterday Judge Beeson was called upon to unite in marriage at his office in the court house Mr. John B. Jackson and Miss Alice E. Sorenson, both of Sioux City, and the ceremony was performed in the judge's usual accommodating manner and the newly weds departed from the court house safely united in the bonds of wedlock and happy in their wedded bliss.

The past week has been a very lively one in the marriage license department and the judge is awaiting applications every day in hopes of making a record-breaker, and if any of the young people are contemplating matrimony now is the time to get in while the going is good.

A FORMER PLATTS-MOUTH RESIDENT COMMITS SUICIDE

A tragedy involving two former Plattsburgh people occurred last evening at 9:15 in South Omaha, when Burl Chandler committed suicide by shooting himself just above the right ear, and death was a matter of a few seconds after the shot had been fired. The suicide occurred at the home of Albert Harkins, at 1415 Missouri avenue, just after Chandler returned from Omaha, where he had been attending a session of the district court in which his wife was securing a separation from him, and it is thought that the impending separation drove the man to commit the rash act. When committing the deed Chandler was standing on the doorstep of the Harkins home.

Mr. Chandler and his wife were living at 415 South Nineteenth street, Omaha, and had agreed on a separation, which was consummated at the session of the district court yesterday. They had only lived in Omaha a short time, going there from Lincoln, where they had made their home for several years. Both Chandler and his wife were former residents of Plattsburgh, and the unfortunate man was born and reared here, and his wife, a Miss Gleason, was also reared to womanhood in this city, and they removed from this place to Lincoln some fifteen years ago and have since made their home there, and the domestic trouble coming up has occasioned a great deal of grief to the husband, and this has constantly been growing until the removal of the family to Omaha, when the final break between them came. The body of the man was turned over to the coroner of Douglas county, who will hold an inquest.
