OLD FARM RESIDENCE OF TOM RUBY DESTROYED BY FIRE SATURDAY

The house on the farm of Tom Ruby, which was vacated a short time ago by the family when they moved into the new home a short distance away, was destroyed by fire Saturday and there was not enough left of the building to tell what it looked like. From what could be learned of the fire it would appear that a man employed about the farm was endeavoring to rid the place of some wasps and flies that had made their headquarters there, and to do this he employed a torch made out of newspapers, and the treatment was effective, too, but unfortunately before it was noticed the woodwork of the house was blazing, as a result of the fire cure for the insects, and before anything could be did to check the spread of the flames the building was a roaring furnace and it required the hardest kind of work to save the new house just a short distance away. The heat scorched the paint on the new residence in bad shape and but for the prompt work of the family would probably have resulted in the loss of both houses. There was no insurance on the burned building and it will be a total loss to Mr. Ruby. At the time the fire was discovered the family was getting ready to start for Plattsmouth and if it had been a few minutes later it is probable that both houses would have gone up in smoke.

J. N. Wise came down this morning from Omaha to visit for a few hours with his old friends, who were delighted to meet him. He reports Mrs. Wise as enjoying good health at present.

Anton Kanka departed this morning for Hugo, Colorado, where he goes to join his wife, who has been there for several months visiting with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Claus Jess, in that locality.

Fred Haffke and wife and Mrs. Henry Ofc and son, Ed, motored out to Lincoln yesterday, where they spent a few hours with Mr. Ofc at the sanitarium, where he is taking treatment for rheumatism.

H. E. Becker and wife and Louis Egenberger, jr., and wife, and Stewart Egenberger motored out to South Bend yesterday, where they visited at the state fisheries for a few hours. They also drove to Ashland.

P. M. Meisinger of Benson, who has been visiting with relatives in this city and vicinity, returned yesterday to his home in the metropolis. Mr. Meisinger has disposed of his hardware store in Benson and will assist the new owner for a few weeks in getting things to running smoothly.

Mr. and Mrs. Fred Beil and Mrs. Chris Beil, residing near Rock Bluffs, drove to this city Saturday for a visit with county seat friends and to attend to some business matters. Mrs. Chris Beil was a pleasant caller at this office, and while here had her subscription to this paper extended for another year.

How to Prevent Croup.

It may be a surprise to you to learn that in many cases croup can be prevented. Mrs. H. M. Johns, Elida, Ohio, relates her experience as follows: "My little boy is subject to croup. During the past winter I kept a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy in the house, and when he began having that croupy cough I would give him one or two doses of it and it would break the attack. I like it better for children than any other cough medicine, because children take it willingly, and it is safe and reliable." Obtainable everywhere.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; also cases out of ten are caused by catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces. We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free. P. J. CHENEY & CO., Toledo, O. THE FEZ AND THE OTTOMAN.

Colors Mean Much, and Only the Arab Foregoes the Tarboosh.

That stream of people crossing the Galata bridge, over the Golden Horn, runs red, for every Ottoman, except the Arab, must wear the tarboosh. "The man with a hat" means the foreigner. The way to see Constantinople without attracting attention to yourself is to slip on a tarboosh, but the wise foreigner has been slow thus to surrender the one visible token of his special extraterritorial rights, for when trouble is afoot the word goes out to spare "the man with a hat" because of the fear of international complications. During the reactionary revolution that followed on the heels of the constitution there was a ludicrous scramble on the part of the Greeks and other Christians to get beneath hats, and the sudden crop of silk hats and derbies was wonderful to behold.

Fashions in fezzes pass in review across the bridge. The Albanian has a white headdress—a cross between a fez and a skullcap. The Persian wears a huge black felt dome that is matched in size only by the big brown built that crowns the head of the dervish. The hadji, whose merit in having made the haj, or pilgrimage, to Mecca is proclaimed by his huge turban, is a frequent figure on the bridge, for every Moslem man who has the means and the physical strength is expected to visit the birthplace of the prophet at least once in his life. The elaborately worked headdress of the hadji is of white cloth, but a sayid's, or descendant of Mohammed, is of green. Sometimes the mosque officials, or imams, even when they are not of the prophet's blood, wear the green turban. Only the men wear any sort of headgear. The oriental woman goes hatless. A cloth or veil is as much covering as she wears on her head. As I stood there on the bridge I saw a group of Turkish women stare through their thick veils at the hat of a foreign woman as she hastened by. Since Young Turkey has come into power western fashions are much in favor in Constantinople.—Youth's Companion.

A BATTLE OF THE WINDS.

When Boreas and Notus Rage at Each Other on the Bosphorus.

By a strange phenomenon. If the south wind prevails the superficial current of the Bosphorus is reversed, though the inferior current continues its accustomed course. Then the waters on the surface are piled tumultuously back upon one another, and the quays, which are several feet above the ordinary Bosphorus level, are flooded and perhaps made impassable. At such times canoes and smaller boats do not dare to venture upon the tempestuous surface.

Sometimes a strong wind blows northward from the Marmora, and another wind of a strong blows with equal violence southward from the Black sea. Then, as one gazes from some central point like Rouneli Hissar, he beholds ships under full sail majestically approaching each other from both directions till at last they are only two or three miles apart. Between them lies a belt of moveless sea, into which they drift helplessly about and perhaps crash into each other's sides.

This is a duel royal between Boreas and Notus and may continue for hours. Gradually the zone of calm is forced north or south. At last one wind withdraws like a defeated champion from the arena. The ships which it has brought thus far drop their anchors and wait or else hire one of the numerous steam tugs which are paddling expectantly about. The ships which have come with the victorious wind triumphantly resume their course, and meanwhile their sailors mock and jeer their fellow mariners whose breeze has failed them.—From "Constantinople," by Dr. Edwin A. Grosvenor.

Clothes in Colonial Days.

When Salem was settled the Massachusetts Bay company furnished clothes for all the men who immigrated and settled in that town. Every man had four pairs of shoes, four pairs of stockings, a pair of Norwich garters, four shirts, two suits of doublets, a pair of hose of leather lined with oilskin, a wooden suit lined with leather, four bands, two handkerchiefs, a green cotton waistcoat, a leather belt, a woolen cap, a black hat, two red knit caps, two pairs of gloves, a cloak lined with cotton and an extra pair of breeches.

Wills in Argentina.

In Argentina the laws provide that a father must leave his children four-fifths of his fortune, and a husband, if he has no children, has to leave half of his property to his wife. An unmarried son is compelled to leave his parents two-thirds of his property, and only unmarried persons without parents or descendants can make wills disposing of their possessions as they see fit.

Shocked Him.

"What did the boss do when you threatened to resign if he didn't raise your pay?" "He surprised me." "How?" "He failed to show the slightest sign of alarm at the prospect of my leaving."—Detroit Free Press.

An Advantage.

"To what do you attribute your remarkable health?" "Well," replied the very old gentleman, "I reckon I got a good start on most people by bein' born before germs was discovered, thereby havin' less to worry about."—Washington Star.
