CHAPTER III. A Vision of the Past.

THE court had settled down again to its grim duty. Following the wild outburst of Strickland, the Judge ordered the district attorney to proceed. He called for Mrs. Trask after the death of Mr. Trask had been formally proved. Every head in the courtroom bent forward eagerly and curiously to get a view of the handsome widow of the slain man.

Joan Trask on the witness stand. How people there are who could have endured what she had endured without emerging from the test—if they came out of it at all—without either health or mind vitally impaired. Years of suspense and of sacrificing for another things most dear to a true woman's heart had but ill prepared her to face the merciless prosecutor of a notorious murder trial, even though the silent victim whose blood demanded vengeance had been the man she had loved as husband.

woman, as usual," who had sought to communicate with her husband. The secretary seated himself at his employer's desk and appeared to desire to avoid the woman's gaze. Suspecting that Glover knew something about the person, Mrs. Trask pressed him with questions, but to all he stated that he knew absolutely nothing. Mrs. Trask became somewhat contemptuous in her attitude. "No, I suppose my husband doesn't take his secretary into his confidence to that extent, although he doesn't make any great attempt to keep things secret. He hasn't even a sense of shame."

both hands as if to brace himself against the gathering storm. With an effort Mrs. Trask controlled herself, and she turned away with a brief "Nothing." "Oh, is that all?" replied Trask, and then Stanley Glover, again the suave, cool, collected private secretary his tension relaxed, stepped into the breach. "Allow me," he said, stepping to the side of Trask and taking his hat and overcoat. He deposited them on a chair. "Anything new, Glover?" asked Trask. "No, sir," replied Glover. Throughout the scene the telephone call from "the other woman" had been surging to and fro in the mind of Mrs. Trask. Now she turned again to her husband, and, looking directly at him, she said: "A woman called you up." "Oh, that's it! Who was it?" Perhaps with the memory of similar scenes in mind the wife answered: "I suppose you know well enough." "If I knew I wouldn't ask you. Who was it?" "I don't know. You don't suppose she'd tell me her name, do you?" "Did she say she'd call again?" Again came the "I don't know" of the wife.

quousness which marks the employee who is not once the servant and the confidant of his employer. There was evident perturbation in his manner, as that of one who was oppressed perhaps by a secret of his own. But there was plainly apparent, in addition, the great desire to please. Glover stood in parlous case. Without willing it he had been forced to witness the outbreak of a wife against her husband, and that husband the man on whom his own prosperity depended. Not knowing what might be future developments in the relations between Mr. and Mrs. Trask he must perforce maintain a discreet distance between the two. "Good evening, Mr. Trask," was his greeting to the man who entered. But the wife who had voiced but a few moments before her dissatisfaction with her husband's conduct did not reply to his "Hello!" Her silence was noticeable. Turning to her, Trask, with a mixture of cynicism and contempt, asked: "Well, what's wrong" with you again?" The disdainful "again," implying that the man had in mind their long course of disagreement, stung the woman to the quick. It looked as though there would be a stormy scene, and Glover took hold of the edge of the desk with

UNION. Ledger.

W. B. Banning, Rae Frans and L. R. Upton motored over to Lincoln Tuesday to attend a banquet given by the Shriners of that city.

It is the opinion of some here that if the fellow who was robbed here last week had been captured he might have been proven to be an ex-convict.

Chas. Graves celebrated his fifty-fourth birthday last Tuesday. Don't tell him that he looks that old unless you happen to be on the other side of the street.

Fred Hiatt, Walt Henderson and Frank Brandon, of Sidney, Ia., were callers here Tuesday. Messrs. Hiatt and Henderson called on the editor while here.

A. A. Johnson and wife of Weeping Water and Asa Johnson and wife of Avoca, spent Sunday with relatives in Union, D. Lynn and wife. They came via auto route.

H. R. Wills and wife of Seattle, Wash. are here visiting Mrs. Wills' daughter, Mrs. G. W. Cheney. They will be here a few days longer after which they will return to their western home.

Uncle Reuben Fosler, better known as Judge Foster, was down to see the editor last Saturday. Mr. Foster is getting along nicely now, and we hope it will not be long before he completely recovers.

Chas. Niday sold his dray and transfer business to Clyde B. Lynde of Falls City. This deal was pulled off without a whisper and Mr. Niday had no intention of selling until approached by Mr. Lynde.

D. B. Porter sold his livery and feed stable to C. F. Harris last week. The deal was made sudden and Mr. Harris sold the stable just as sudden as he bought it to J. B. Kaddy. Mr. Porter will remain a resident of this place and will farm the coming year.

Attorney D. O. Dwyer of Plattsmouth, was a pleasant caller on the editor last Saturday. While here Mr. Dwyer related some of his earlier experiences as a school teacher in Union. He met some of his old pupils and friends here and he didn't forget to let the old pupils know that he still retained that muscle that he developed in maintaining discipline in his school days. Mr. Dwyer believes that the Missouri Pacific officials who had the power to raise the passenger rates will never go to heaven.

Friends of Grandma Reichart will regret to learn that she is quite poorly and has been confined to her bed for the past two weeks. Henry Bluma's new farm residence south of town is almost ready for occupancy. It is a six room cottage 24x25, two stories.

Mrs. Rose Bronkow has applied for a widow's pension of $20 per month for the support of her two children aged 2 and 4 years. Harry Thompson, who is employed as salesman for the wholesale dry-goods firm of Byrne & Hammer, was down from Omaha over Sunday visiting with his mother.

Dr. Poll has closed his suburban home and gone to Lincoln where he and Mrs. Poll may be with their sons who are attending the university and will spend the winter at the state capital.

Mrs. Theo. Heim returned home last week from a visit at El Reno, Oklahoma. She was accompanied by her daughter, Mrs. Hugh Seiver, who will visit with relatives and friends.

Thomas Schneider, the fifteen-year-old son of Joseph Schneider, had his right arm broken above the wrist Tuesday night while cranking an automobile. It was a complete

Henry Kehne one of our worthy farmers was in town Monday for the first time for about five weeks on account of sickness. Mr. Kehne said he was very sick for three weeks with pneumonia and that it was only the good care that Miss Saide Rich gave him that brought him through. He was feeling quite good when in town Monday.

County Commissioner C. E. Heebner was in town Monday and he was heard to say that he had finished threshing a short time ago. His wheat made thirty-seven bushels to the acre and tested fifty-nine pounds. Eight acres of his corn made seventy-five bushels to the acre, the rest of his corn is making about fifty-five bushels to the acre. He also stated that Henry Knabe had corn that was making seventy-five bushels to the acre. These are the best yields we have heard of.

ELMWOOD. Leader-Echo.

Silas E. Greenslate of Omaha, is here visiting his sister, Mrs. C. D. Clapp, and shaking hands with old Elmwood friends.

J. D. Fentiman and son, Ray, shipped three cars of cattle to the Omaha market Monday and another car to the same market Tuesday.

Ernest Fassenbeck of Seneca, Kas., and Mrs. Lizzie Norton, of Wayland, Iowa, visited with their mother, Grandma Fassenbeck the first of the week.

J. P. Cobb left for Kansas City, Mo. Sunday morning where he will join Mrs. Cobb who is visiting at that place. They will visit over Thanksgiving there and then return home.

Mrs. Dr. Evans, of Sioux Falls, S. D., arrived Friday and visited over Sunday with her brother, P. J. Marshall and family. She went from here to Panama, Neb., for a visit with her brother there and will visit at other points before returning home.

Wm. Carroll, who has been visiting here for some time with his brother, H. H. Carroll, departed Tuesday morning for Ft. Collins, Colo., near which place he will visit two other brothers before returning to his home in North Dakota. H. H. accompanied his brother as far as Lincoln.

J. A. Fisher, of Greenwood, an old resident of that locality, and member of the G. A. R., drove over from his home Tuesday morning and took the train for Union where he went to visit an old friend and comrade, Geo. LaRue, who is critically ill. The two men fought in the same company during the Civil war.

Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Minford and daughter, Miss Valentine, departed Wednesday morning for Marryville, Mo., where they will visit at the home of Mrs. Minford's sister, Mrs. Walter Muts. Their daughter, Miss Willa Minford, who is attending Drake University at Des Moines, Ia., will join in the visit at Marryville.
