DON'T FAIL TO SEE "UNDER COVER" AT PARMELE TOMORROW

A play of adventure, a play of mystery, a play of thrill. These phrases accurately describe "Under Cover," Rod Cooper Megrue's exciting modern melodrama which, direct from a run of one whole year at the Cort theater, New York, Selwyn & Company will present at the Parmele theater tomorrow (Friday) night. Every now and then the cry is raised that "melodrama is dead" only to have a play of this character which is plausible, gripping and maintains a consistent love interest come along and establish itself securely as one of the popular successes of the season. Just such a play is "Under Cover." It appeals to the imagination, to the love of adventure, and it reveals a battle of wits between the pursuer and the pursued. In "Under Cover" the pursuer is represented by the United States secret service and the pursued by a smuggler who has brought a necklace valued at $200,000 into this country without paying the necessary duty thereon. The story maintains its interest from first to last and its final curtain denouement is so unexpected that the audience sits up in astonishment. As is the rule with Selwyn productions, an excellent cast has been provided for "Under Cover."

MRS HARRY WILCOX IS SEVERELY BURNED BY HOT LARD

Mrs. Harry Wilcox was injured in a very painful manner at her home in this city on Tuesday, when a glass jar in which she was sending some hot lard exploded, and as a result the hot fluid was thrown over her persons, burning her on the face somewhat and a part of the burning grease ran down under her clothing over one shoulder, burning it quite badly. The clothing was torn away as quickly as possible and the hot fluid removed, but not until she had been burned very severely. The suffering of the lady was most intense for some time, but she is somewhat better now and the injured portion of her body yielding to treatment, although it is still very painful and it will be some time before she is entirely over the effects of the unfortunate experience.
