OCEANS OF VODKA, BUT NOT A DROP TO DRINK.

Russia, Now Dry, Seeks Uses For 260,000,000 Gallons in Stock.

What can be done with the 260,000,000 gallons of vodka now held in stock by the Russian government as a consequence of the prohibition of the sale of the spirit?

This was the subject of an interesting debate at a recent session of the duma. Some members favored destroying the stocks, others wanted industrial uses found for the vodka, and all agreed that the stocks must not remain in existence as a temptation to some reactionary finance minister to reopen the monopoly and sale after the war.

The present finance minister, Bark, in concluding the debate made this momentous declaration:

"I deem it necessary to declare categorically that all suspicions ascribing to the government any intention of resuming the state sale of liquors are unfounded. I declare categorically that the government will encourage temperance after the war, also, and that any return to the old state of affairs is impossible. Proof of this intention is the fact that the government is now engaged in drawing up a bill on lines suggested by forty-five members of the duma for the maintenance of temperance for all time. This bill already has met with the sympathy of the entire council of ministers, and vodka, in accordance with the czar's wish as expressed to me, will be totally prohibited forever. For this reason I am entirely in favor of destroying the existing stock of vodka."

In the course of further remarks M. Bark indicated a scheme for the utilization of the spirit for technical purposes. His ministry, he said, already had announced a series of prizes for inventions having for their object the adaptation of the spirit to technical purposes and had issued a pamphlet on the use of the spirit for motorists, and a prepared combination of the spirit and benzine for the use of motorists.

Further, the ministry had decided to make a grant of $30,000 (about $150,000) for the erection of a factory for manufacturing artificial India rubber out of the spirit on a system invented by Ostromyslensky, and measures would be taken for increasing the degree of methylation of existing stocks. M. Bark, in conclusion, agreed to grant $100,000 (about $500,000) to the temperance societies. He announced that no fewer than 48,000 salesmen of vodka already had been discharged, and that a large number of the remaining 8,000 had gone to the war.

SMOKELESS, NOISELESS GUN.

Navy to Test Invention, Believed to Be Operated by Compressed Air.

Plans of a dynamite gun said to be smokeless, noiseless and without recoil, the invention of Edward Ferguson of Baltimore, have been laid before the navy department. A test of the gun probably will be made at the Indian Head (Md.) testing grounds soon. Ferguson began working on his invention several months before the European war began. It was completed and tried out last summer, when a steel lined, wire bound oak model was fired off. Crude as it was, it is said to have thrown a pound missile four miles.

The latest model is a twenty pounder, adjustable to hurl a dynamite bomb to distances up to twenty-two miles. It is believed that the gun is operated by compressed air.

AUSTRIA USES WOODEN SHOES

Dutch Footwear, Made Necessary by High Cost of Leather, Is Popular.

Wooden shoes are becoming popular in many parts of Austria, and, while unaccustomed to this kind of footwear, the people, says the Reichspost of Neuhammer, "walk in them perfectly, and the children run and jump in them as though it were a real pleasure."

The high price of leather has brought about this change, and many factories in the villages of Furstenhut and Ausseigefeld are turning out large quantities of wooden shoes. The shoes are made from beechwood and pine and can be had at as low a price as 20 cents. They are said to be very warm.
