LINER ENGLISH-MAN TRIED TO MAKE ESCAPE

Then Shelled and Torpedoed—Wilson Is Framing Demands on the Kaiser.

PUNISHMENT TO BE SEVERE

Washington, March 30.—The British Ward liner Englishman, which was sunk a few days ago, was shelled and torpedoed after attempting to escape, according to affidavits of American survivors cabled to the state department from Liverpool.

The captain swore that his vessel attempted to escape when approached by the submarine, but after being shelled, she stopped and then was torpedoed.

It is reported that one American sailor on the destroyed British ship is missing.

Wilson Seeks Final Settlement.

Settlement of the entire submarine question with Germany, and not the mere disposal of the cases of the channel packet Sussex and merchant ship Englishman, is President Wilson's object in the present negotiations, high administration officials say.

If Germany admits or it is proved that a German submarine torpedoed the Sussex or Englishman, some officials said that diplomatic relations are to be broken off unless Germany took the following steps:

Disavowal.

Such punishment of the commander as is meted out to officers who disobey imperial orders.

Reparation for damage also, and as far as possible, for life lost.

Agreement by Germany to abide by international law in the conduct of U boat warfare. This would mean the abrogation of her decree to sink armed merchantmen without warning.

No word has reached the state department about a reported unwarned torpedo attack upon the steamer Manchester Engineer. Press reports said that two Americans aboard swore she was a submarine victim.

England Replies to Protest.

Great Britain has answered the protest against British seizure of American securities. It is understood that the reply states that the securities were destined from Germany to this country to establish credit for Germany here.

MAYOR CHARLES W. BRYAN

Democratic Candidate for Governor

Mayor Bryan favors the re-election of President Wilson.

Endorses business administration of Governor Morehead.

Mayor Bryan is urging a reduction of telephone rates. He defeated fire insurance combine bill in last legislature, saving fire policy-holders probably $800,000.00 annually, and will continue to favor competition in rates. Favors scientific good roads building under supervision of state and county engineers. Favors rural credits system for farmers. Favors state hail insurance. Urges public development of water power to furnish cheap electric current to light home and operate machines on farms and in factories to supply heat and to operate interurban railways.

These practical and constructive measures are in operation in other parts of the country, but impossible in Nebraska on account of interference of special interests and their lobbyists. Help drive them out and legislate for Nebraska people the same as has been done for Lincoln people. Free the party and party machinery from interference of the special interests, and elect all county and state officers under the leadership of Mayor Bryan as candidate for governor, who has had experience in executive affairs and who has a record of achievement in Lincoln. Primaries April 18.

SISTER RECEIVES LETTER FROM BROTHER AT THE FRONT

A letter has just been received by Miss Theresa Lehnst from her brother Otto, telling of some of the experiences of the American army in its hunt for Villa in Mexico. The brother is a member of one of the cavalry regiments in the advance guard of the army, and when the letter was written, on March 21, they were nearly 200 miles in the enemy's country and moving fast toward the foothills. Otto states that the journey was tiresome through the hot and dusty desert country, which is desolate and barren with a few exceptions. He states that the troops were all feeling fine and in the best of condition and spirits and glad of the opportunity of activity, after spending the last two years at El Paso in camp and rapidly getting in trim for the hard work before them in the coming campaign. When the letter was written it was thought that the troops were nearing the hiding place of Villa in the foothills and all were eager for the chance to secure the outlaw chieftain who had murdered the Americans at Columbus only a short time before. The news from the front was most welcome to the sister, as Otto has been in the army for the past few years, having enlisted at Fort Snelling, Minnesota, and has been on patrol duty on the border for the past two years. Otto is a cousin of Fritz Simoneit, Mrs. Fred Nolting and Frank Steppatt, all of this vicinity, and they will be glad to learn that he is getting along so nicely in his army life and trust that he may be among those who are able to land the famous outlaw and bandit.

In the Old Home Town.

Mrs. Thomas Sinclair went down from the big city to the old home town last week and visited "between trains" with her old father. She didn't stay in the town long. Since she moved to the big city Mrs. Thomas Sinclair has lost interest in the old home town. She goes down once a year to see how her father is getting along and it is even intimated in the old home town that she would even not visit him quite so frequently if it were not for the fact that she is afraid her father might go to the city to see her.

When Mrs. Thomas Sinclair lived in the old home town everybody knew her as "the youngest Woodson girl," or "Min." Woodson. Her father was a blacksmith and had a big family. Sometimes it was hard sledding for him to supply the family groceries, but he succeeded. He sent the children to school, and they all grew up and moved away from the town. They all come back occasionally, too, and everybody calls them by their first name and everybody likes to see them. But not Mrs. Thomas Sinclair. When she visits the old home town she goes to the hotel and locks the door to her room. She calls a taxicab, which really is a second hand Ford in the old home town, you know, and drives down to where her father lives alone in the old house. She remains there twenty minutes or so and goes back to the hotel and waits until train time at the hotel.

Once the editor of the Old Home Paper met her on the street on one of her annual visits, and exclaimed: "Well, I do say, if it ain't 'Min.' Woodson. Howdy do, and how is Tommy?" For Thomas Sinclair was brought up in the old home town, too. His first money was earned driving the editor's cow to pasture every morning and home every evening. Of course the editor of the Old Home Paper took an interest in "Tommy."

The folks in the old home town talk yet about how "Min." Sinclair "froze" the editor when he tried to shake hands with her on the street. For the Sinclairs have "done well" since they came to the city. They have an automobile and give parties at the country clubs and figure in the society columns frequently.

But in the Old Home Paper the name of Sinclair does not figure. There is an impression in the old home town that Mrs. Thomas Sinclair is ashamed of the place where she was "raised," and when her name is mentioned at all the neighbors who used to save their old dresses so that Mrs. Woodson could make clothes for the girls shake their heads and say: "Min." isn't like the rest of the Woodson children."

And if "Min." Sinclair could hear how they say it—those old neighbors down in the old home town—there are those who imagine that she would feel that maybe she had paid too dearly for her position in "society." — Kansas City Star.
