"THAT'S WHAT THE ROSE SAID TO ME"

There were two of our prominent citizens attending the show at the Airdome last evening and during the performance several songs were given that seemed to greatly affect the two gentlemen, and no sooner was the show out than it was decided to enjoy a few musical numbers, and the two gentlemen proceed to strike up the tune of "That's What the Rose Said to Me" with great effect and sweetness (?) and greatly moved those hearing it. The gentlemen are receiving a great many congratulations as their efforts were overheard by a number of friends, and the musical headquarters will soon be transferred to the Hotel Riley, where the songbirds make their headquarters.

"THE YELLOW PASSPORT" AT THE AIRDOME
The Peerless Star in One of the Most Powerful Photodramas Ever Produced.
On Tuesday evening next at the Airdome will be shown one of the greatest successes of Clara Kimball Young, known as the "Queen of the Screen," in presenting "The Yellow Passport," a thrilling drama of life among the Jews of Russia under the persecution of the government. In the role of Sonia, the beautiful Russian Jewess, Miss Kimball is seen at her best. The story of the play is as follows:
Sonia Sokoloff, the daughter of a well-to-do Jewish family in Kiev, is ambitious to become a grand opera singer.
Fedia, a Russian police spy, is employed by the trusting Sokoloffs as a valet. Fedia desires Sonia, and when she is alone, he attacks her. She escapes from him, but in order not to alarm her parents, discharges Fedia and tells them nothing of her experience. Fedia, to revenge himself, swears allegiance to the notorious Black Hundred, a mob organized to destroy the Jews.

Fedia incites Ivan, a leader of the Black Hundred, to a terrible massacre. The Sokoloffs are all killed except Sonia and her uncle Myron, who escapes from his own home and comes to her rescue.
Fedia, during the massacre, steals into the house in search of Sonia. Ivan, returning for loot, hears Sonia's cries for help. Seeing her beauty, he and Fedia fight for possession of her. Ivan is killed. Sonia escapes, throwing a lamp at Fedia, knocking him unconscious.
Weeks later Sonia, no longer considered a citizen, is ordered to leave Russia. Loath to be torn from the graves of her family and give up her music lessons, Sonia, in spite of her Uncle Myron's protests, registers with the police as a public woman and takes out a yellow passport. (Only Jewish women with yellow passports are allowed to remain outside the Pale, which is the Jewish settlement.)
Suspecting that Sonia is a moral woman living under false pretenses, the police master finds out that she has paid the landlords and neighboring police for protection. Fedia, now a police inspector, is sent to spy upon her. Sonia and her Uncle Myron trick the police, but fearing that Fedia will annoy her again, they leave for America.
On the ship are Carl Rosenheimer and his son, Adolph. They hear of the Russian Nightingale among the steerage passengers and interview her. During the voyage Adolph and Sonia fall in love.

Reaching Ellis Island, Sonia and her Uncle Myron once more trick the officials, concealing from them all knowledge of the yellow passport and making it possible for Sonia to be admitted.
In America Sonia becomes a famous opera singer and is formally engaged to Adolph. Fedia is sent by the Russian government to this country. At the height of her success and happiness Fedia appears on the scene and discloses to the Rosenheimers the history of Sonia's yellow passport.
The proofs of her innocence, the letters written by her to the police master, were left in Russia when she and her Uncle Myron fled to America. Akulena and Fiodor, expelled from Russia, come to America, carrying with them these letters, in hopes of finding Sonia.
Adolph regrets his denouncement of Sonia even before the proofs of her innocence are produced.
For Sale.
The Hotel Berger, of Murray, Nebraska, is offered for sale, and a price that is right, if taken soon. For full particulars and terms see Mrs. J. W. Berger at the hotel.
