Good Time in Murray on the Fourth Celebrating the Fourth

The Fourth of July in Murray was a great deal more than the citizens of this little city and surrounding territory had really anticipated. They had planned a home staying picnic for those that did not wish to go away to celebrate the Fourth. The occasion was indeed more than they had expected. The Hon. C. A. Rawls, of Plattsburgh, was present, and delivered a very interesting talk, which was indeed highly enjoyed by everyone. Mr. Rawls is a good talker, and without the slightest preparation whatever, he delivered an excellent Fourth of July address. There were quite a number of races for the amusement of those who enjoy this line of sport, also a base ball game by the local talent. In the race contests small prizes were given to the winners, who were as follows: Boys race, under ten years of age, first prize, Dick March, second, Harold Hamilton; Little Girl's race, Lizzie Powell took first prize and Leona Puls second; Boys' Race, 12 to 15 years of age, Ralph Holmes was in the lead and Chester Schrader a close second; Girls' Race, Sarah Schlotman won the first prize and Ella Hamilton second. In the men's race Mr. Carey came under the rope first with Frank Valley a close second, and in the wheelbarrow race Mr. Cary also took first and Carl Lyngse second. In the chicken race Miss Margie Walker won first prize and Miss Ogla Minford second. In the umbrella race, first prize went to Chas. Spangler and Miss Geraldine Young, and second to G. M. Minford and Miss Helen Todd. During the afternoon there was a very exciting ball game in which all the local sports took part. W. S. Smith and Albert Young being the battery for one side and Jeff Brendel and Mr. Cary for the other. Hon. C. A. Rawls filling the dangerous position of umpire, and done very well for the simple fact that he did not claim to be very well versed in the new ruling of the great game, and as the players all knew a great deal less than he did in this regard, the game went along very nicely. In the evening there was a very nice display of fireworks given from the top of the Puls & Gansemer store building that were enjoyed very much by all. The promoters of this little occasion feel very proud over the excellent time that was had in Murray, and may in the future try one on a much larger scale.

No Fishing Without Lunch

Glen Boedeker, Elmer Boedeker, Ted Barrows and Virgil Rose, composed a party that started over to the Big Muddy on the Fourth of July to spend the Fourth. They had previously prepared a very fine lunch for the occasion, and after making the long journey over to the river and unpacking their equipment for the day's pleasure they found that they had lost the engage to the wagon, and with it had come their lunch. Not caring to celebrate the day in hunger, they immediately decided to return home, and at the corner of the farm where Harry Baxter lives they found the engage and lunch, but being rather late at this time they gave up the day at the river and celebrate in Murray with their families.

JOE STECHER NO RACER BUT GOOD WRESTLER

Gives Lewis Every Chance in the World, But Lewis Does Not Get Near Him.

THE CROWD DISGUSTED WITH EFFORTS OF LEWIS

Omaha, July 5.—Ed "Strangler" Lewis, heralded throughout the east as championship timber, kept away from Joe Stecher five hours, flat, at the fairgrounds yesterday afternoon and last evening, and thereby earned a draw decision from Referee Ed Smith.

In some particulars this was the most remarkable grapple in the entire history of this ancient game. In other respects, it was a sad disappointment to the thousands of friends of the Dodge wrestler who were there to see their idol dethrone another comer.

The estimated attendance was 20,000 persons. Of this number by far the greater part came from Nebraska. When it grew evident that Lewis was not going to give Stecher an opportunity to even get a good finger-hold on him, these folks resigned themselves to the ultimate outcome.

From the beginning to end Stecher carried the fight to his opponent. Lewis failed to step forward once during the entire five hours. He went backward all the time. He was not in there to wrestle, but to keep away from Stecher, and he succeeded.

Time after time Stecher laid himself open to attack. Purposely he placed himself in jeopardy in an effort to induce Lewis to take a chance, but the pseudo "Strangler" wasn't going to do any more work than necessary—and he didn't.

Lewis is Hissed. Hoots, jeers, hisses and cushions met Lewis on all sides during the latter part of the final hour or so. The crowd grew tired of his dilatory tactics, and took this method of avenging itself. The "Strangler," however, accepted these tokens of disrespect with a sort of a go-to-the-devil air, and paid no attention to either the gibes or missiles.

For the first two and a half hours the match really was worth while, albeit Lewis was doing no more than sparring at any time. Stecher worked hard in an effort to place his opponent in a position where he could secure his famous leg hold. He went to the mat dozens of times attempting to grab the Strangler's lower extremities.

Finally, however, Stecher tumbled to the fact that Lewis was not wrestling, and put in the remainder of his time playing the Strangler's own game. It would have been foolhardy for Stecher to completely exhaunt himself, in the face of Lewis' fight, and his friends shouted compliments to him when assumed the same sort of a game that his opponent played.

When darkness came, about 8:15 o'clock Referee Smith wanted to make it a draw, and called the two men to him for this purpose. Gene Melady, the promoter, leaped into the ring and declared that the men should finish the bout. Smith then sent them to the center of the mat again and there they fooled around until 9 o'clock, when, seeing the utter disgust of the crowd and the ugly mood that showed in spots, Melady told Smith to call it off.
