Will Interest Readers of the Journal.

Those having the misfortune to suffer from backache, urinary disorders, gravel, dropsical swellings, rheumatic pains, or other kidney and bladder disorders, will read with gratification this encouraging statement by a Plattsmouth man.

Louis Kroehler, prop. of hardware store, 5211 Main street, Plattsmouth, says: "About a year ago, I had pains in my back. I was so lame I couldn't stoop. My kidneys were weak and I had a tired, languid feeling nearly all the time. Headaches were common. Doan's Kidney Pills, procured from Edward Rynott & Co.'s Drug Store, soon relieved me." (Statement given April 10, 1912.)

On February 22, 1916, Mr. Kroehler said: "I still hold the same high estimation of Doan's Kidney Pills today as I did when I first endorsed them. It has been several years since I have had occasion to take a kidney medicine, which speaks well for Doan's Kidney Pills."

HERE IS THE PROOF:

ST. LOUIS POST-DISPATCH

CAN'T GET TRUTH FROM CUSTOMERS OF BOOTLEGGERS

Kansas Governor Says 'Otherwise Good Citizens Will Protect Tramp Liquor Sellers.'

"THEY LIE ABOUT ACTS"

"Deny Purchase, With Bottle in Pocket"—Plan to Remedy Condition Is Wanted.

Special to the Post-Dispatch. TOPEKA, Kan., Jan. 23.—Gov. Arthur Capper of Kansas is looking for a man who can develop some method, psychological, mechanical or otherwise, to extract the truth from ordinarily good citizens who are customers of bootleggers.

Gov. Capper recently sent a letter to all Kansas County Attorneys, asking them for suggestions on methods of enforcing the prohibitory law. The Governor wanted to know what legislation was needed or in what way the State could help the local officials in law enforcement.

"I find that the County Attorneys do not need much additional help in law enforcement," said the Governor, after studying the replies from 50 County Attorneys who had had at least one year of active law enforcement work. "They suggested one or two amendments, or changes to the present laws.

Seeking Truth Extractor. "But what Kansas needs most is someone who will evolve some method of extracting the truth from the patron of a bootlegger. The man who buys booze in Kansas is given to an exaggerated sense of honor. He becomes an extreme individual. The patron of the bootlegger is a Jekyll and Hyde sort of a proposition. The County Attorneys tell me of dozens of men, honest, industrious citizens, regarded as men of the highest type in their communities, who will do almost anything rather than tell the truth about where they purchased a bottle of booze.

"If I lent a club or lodge proposition, either. There are ties of fraternity that would cause a man to refuse to divulge the sale or dispensation of liquor in a clubhouse. But there is nothing of this when the liquor is purchased from a bootlegger. In this case a man goes out hunting for liquor and finds it in some drug store, or livery stable, or down on an island, or some other out-of-the-way place where a man has set up a temporary joint.

Are Chiefly Transients. Ten chances to one the purchaser never saw the bootlegger before and is not likely to see him again. The bootleggers are chiefly transients, who are able to dodge the law by selling a little liquor in one town and jumping to another before the officers hear of their activities or see evidences of the sales.

"But to get information from men about who sold the liquor or a description of the place where the bootlegger was operating is next to impossible. They will lie about their actions—deny that they purchased liquor of anybody and have the bottles in their pocket—say they didn't pay any attention and could not describe the place or the man where they obtained the liquor and could not give any instructions as to how officers could find the place. They do this in a secret incognito, when no one could find out they had told anything, when they have been promised immunity from appearing as witness in open court and told that the information is desired simply to get the evidence on which to base a raid on a joint.

Good Citizens Otherwise. "County Attorneys have told me of numerous instances where men have voluntarily given information of violations of the cigarette law and the law prohibiting the sale of tobacco to minors. These men have been active in everything that counts for good citizenship, clean towns, clean homes and law enforcement generally. But the same men would deliberately commit perjury to shield a worthless tramp or a bootlegger who had sold them a bottle of beer or a half pint of whisky.

"It is the most remarkable condition I have ever found in Kansas and I did not know it was so general until I received these reports from the County Attorneys. Why men should have this exaggerated sense of honor when they patronize bootleggers is beyond me and I haven't found anyone who could suggest a good reason for it."

Photographic Copy of Governor Capper's Interview Presented Herewith.

Would a Great Newspaper Like the St. Louis Post-Dispatch Misquote the Governor of a State?

Why Did Governor Capper Wait Six Months Before Disavowing the Interview?

Governor Capper of Kansas denies making the statement attributed to him in a quotation we made from an interview which appeared in the St. Louis Post-Dispatch of January 30, 1916.

The Nebraska Prosperity League reprinted part of the interview in one of its advertisements. Proof that the Nebraska Prosperity League did not falsify is presented herewith. The entire interview as it appeared in the St. Louis Post-Dispatch has been photographed and is now placed before the public for inspection.

We now challenge Governor Capper to say whether he charges the St. Louis Post-Dispatch with manufacturing a "fake" interview, or whether he (Gov. Capper) did make the statements attributed to him, as shown herewith in full. The article from which we quoted appeared last January, and to the best of our knowledge, Governor Capper has permitted the interview to stand uncontradicted for over six months.

The public will have noticed that whenever The Nebraska prosperity League makes a quotation, or presents figures, it gives its source of authority. This is done in order that the public may without difficulty verify the statements made.
