

THE COMING OF THE VICE PRESIDENT MARSHALL

The Opera House Crowded to Overflowing to Hear the Distinguished Indianian.

ADDRESSES SCHOOL CHILDREN

The Vice President's Visit Was Extended Magnificent Reception, and Commercial Club Did Themselves Proud.

From Tuesday's Daily.

Today Plattsmouth paid a well deserved tribute to the "second citizen in the land" and the democracy paid its tribute of respect to Thomas Riley Marshall, the party's representative for vice-president of the United States and the running mate of Woodrow Wilson. The Parnell theater, long before the hour for the speaking, was filled with 1,000 persons awaiting the coming of the great Indiana statesman whose ability as an orator they were soon to realize.

Mr. Marshall and party, consisting of Governor John H. Morehead, Attorney General Willis Reed, Edgar Howard, candidate for lieutenant governor, and L. F. Langhorst, state chairman of the democratic committee, arrived in the city over the Missouri Pacific and were taken by automobile to the public school campus, where the vice president reviewed the children and extended them greetings. At the Hotel Riley the vice president and Governor Morehead held a reception lasting a half hour, and during which time hundreds of the citizens of Cass county were given the opportunity of meeting their distinguished guest. The Burlington band under the leadership of Richard Avard played a number of selections at the theater preceding the arrival of the distinguished party, and it was not until 10:30 that the exercises were opened by Dr. J. S. Livingston, who in a few brief words introduced Governor Morehead as the presiding officer of the meeting, and the governor gave a few words of the fact that the great state of Nebraska should be proud of her prosperity and success in the recent years and, in the fact that it had been so successful the democratic state officials felt great pride that they had been able to have such a part. In the two years of the democratic administration in the state $1,000,000 had been saved to the taxpayers by the different officials of the state government, and the speaker felt that those who had served faithfully as the stewards of the people were entitled to another term of service. Under the democrats the taxes had been reduced in the state; from an indebtedness of $250,000 the party had brought a surplus in the state finances that gave to the state a sum for its expenses each year, and this was made possible by a business-like administration of the offices by the democratic state officials. To aid in the national progress Governor Morehead urged the re-election of Senator Gilbert M. Hitchcock, and the election of John A. Maguire to congress, that the people might have men to assist the president in the securing of the needed legislation. He stated that in Keith Neville, the democracy had a candidate as clean as any man in the state, who, if elected, would be the governor, without the control of any clique or any man, and would bring to the chair of governor a business-like administration of the office. The governor at the close of his remarks introduced Hon. Willis E. Reed, the attorney general, whose term of office has been the most successful of any officer in the state and who has secured for the state a great saving in all lines of administration.

Mr. Reed in his remarks was limited by time and was unable to enter into an extensive address, but in the few minutes that remained for him made a very farcable speech in pointing out what had been accomplished in the handling of affairs of the state during the time the government has been under the charge of the democratic party, when $1,000,000 had been saved. He told of the saving in bridge contracts of a sum amounting to more than $100,000, and of the securing for the state by the office of the attorney general of $250,000 from estates which possessed no heirs, and which sum had gone to the permanent school fund of the state. He also touched on the bank guarantee law. In closing Attorney General Reed stopped for a moment to indulge in a personal touch on his feelings in visiting this city, where he had known so many friends, naming the late Dr. W. H. Dearing, Matthew and Henry Gering and Miss Josephine Murphy, the stenographer in his office at Lincoln, and who is a Plattsmouth girl. Mr. Reed paid a glowing tribute to Keith Neville, candidate for governor of the state, and who has been assailed so bitterly by the republicans, and Mr. Reed stated that there was no one better qualified for the office than this splendid young man who has been chosen as the standard bearer of the democracy, and who, if elected, will see that Nebraska is well represented in a business governor all the time, and one who will see that the laws are enforced.

Edgar Howard, candidate for lieutenant governor, gave a few brief remarks, touching on the state owned water plants, of which he is a great advocate. Mr. Howard is to visit this city later and will then take up the issues he was of necessity compelled to omit.

Hon. John A. Maguire in the short time allotted to him, stated that the issue at stake was the endorsement of the democratic administration of Woodrow Wilson and that the legislation enacted by the democratic party would stand the test of all times, and that to continue this is was necessary that President Wilson be returned, as well as a congress that could carry out the plans of the administration.

The governor in his introductory of Vice President Marshall paid a glowing tribute to the work of the national administration and the congress that had labored so earnestly in the interests of the great common people.

Mr. Marshall received a great ovation as he arose to speak, and as the hour was nearing noon was forced to curtail greatly his remarks along the statement of the record of the administration at Washington. He stated that the belief he held of the American government was in its great mission of a duty to mankind throughout the world, and that the real fundamental principal of the American government rested upon the teachings of the Man of Galilee, "Do unto others as you would they should do unto you." He was opposed to war, he stated, and believed that the American government was the only hope of the world for universal peace, and that through this teaching of peace and good will the American people would reach their proper position in the world. The administration of Woodrow Wilson had been for the benefit of mankind, and the only issue that the republican party had was of criticism without offering to the people a remedy for their carping criticism of what Wilson has carried out in the three and a half years of his administration. Since the time of taking office by President Wilson he had driven out the lobby from the capital at Washington and brought the government closer to the people.

In their foment of trouble and heckling toward the president the republicans were pursuing a policy of knocking, and, in fact, as the speaker stated in a vein of humor, that one of the republican orators in Indiana had badly mashed his thumb in making a stump speech. In touching on the Roosevelt activities in the campaign Mr. Marshall stated that the former president had told "what he would have done in the case of the sinking of the Lusitania by the Germans, and Mr. Roosevelt would have seized all German shipping in this country, but Mr. Marshall in continuing, pointed out that while Roosevelt had seized the canal zone from the republic of Columbia, he would have been up against another problem in trying to start trouble with the emperor of Germany. If the election of Hughes occurred in November, Mr. Marshall stated, Roosevelt and his rough riders would start their march on Berlin, through Mexico.

In the conduct of the affairs of one nation toward another the vice president stated that the teachings of the democratic party had been that each nation struggling with its problems and their trials should be allowed to work out their own destinies without interference from the outside world. There were only two classes in the country, Mr. Marshall declared, one who wanted to do for the benefit of the republic, and one who wanted the republic to do for them.

In conclusion Mr. Marshall stated that the issue laid before the American people was that of peace with Wilson, or war, with Hughes.

The speech of Mr. Marshall was frequently stopped by the rounds of applause from the delighted auditors who heard the message of democracy from the great citizen of Indiana. At the conclusion of the speechmaking the vice president and party were taken to the Hotel Riley where they, together with the officers of the Commercial club and a number of democratic leaders, were entertained at luncheon by the Commercial club. At the luncheon Mr. E. H. Westcott, president of the Commercial club, welcomed the distinguished party and extended the welcome of the city to Vice President Marshall, who responded with a few words of appreciation of his welcome and spoke briefly of the advantages of the Commercial club to the life of the community. The luncheon was most enjoyable throughout to the members of the party and was given with true democratic hospitality.

The party left for Nebraska City following the luncheon, where Mr. Marshall is to speak at 2 o'clock.

TWO DEATHS AT THE MASONIC HOME

From Tuesday's Daily.

Death yesterday visited the Masonic Home in this city and took away two of the residents who have been making their home there for the past few years. Mrs. Alvina Metzger, aged 85, who has been living at the Home for the past five years was the first to receive the message to the great beyond, passing away yesterday morning after a long illness suffering from the debility that her weight of years had brought to her. She is survived by the aged husband, who is also living at the Home. The funeral services of this lady were held at 2 o'clock this afternoon from the Home, conducted by Rev. H. G. McClusky of the Presbyterian church, and the interment was in Oak Hill cemetery. Mr. and Mrs. Metzger formerly resided in Omaha before coming here to live.

The second of the members to pass away was John Linn, aged 72 years, formerly a resident of Seward, and who had lived at the Home since 1910. Mr. Linn had been a sufferer from hardening of the arteries for several years and death had gradually come upon him despite all that skill and loving service could do to stay the ravages of the disease. Mr. Linn was a widower and had no family to mourn his death. The body of Mr. Linn was taken to Seward this morning, where the funeral will be held under the auspices of the Masonic order in that city.

RAY HITCHMAN JOINS THE FORD LOCAL FORCES

From Wednesday's Daily.

Ray Hitchman has been engaged by the local Ford agency and has moved his shop to their new location on Sixth street, where he will be glad to meet all Ford owners.

Mr. Hitchman is too well known in this community to need any introduction, and the T. H. Pollock Auto company are very fortunate in securing his services, as he is well known to be one of the very best Ford mechanics in the state.

THE DEATH OF MRS. EDWARD THRALL

From Tuesday's Daily.

At an early hour this morning, just as the day was coming into being, the spirit of Mrs. Edward Thrall, a resident of Plattsmouth since 1890 took its flight into the arms of her Maker after an illness covering the past three years. Mrs. Thrall has been in poor health for the past few years but only since Thursday has her condition been so serious as to cause alarm to the family and friends. A sufferer for so long the message of death came as a relief to this good woman and she quietly sank into the sleep that knows no awakening.

Mrs. Thrall was born in Salem, Massachusetts, July 15, 1858, and spent her early girlhood in New England until the family removed to Sabula, Ia., where they resided for a number of years. In 1890 Mrs. Thrall came to Plattsmouth and was married the same year and has since made this city her home. To mourn her loss she leaves the husband and one sister, Mrs. W. M. Thompson, of Sabula, Ia., and in their hour of grief the family will have the sympathy of the entire community.

Mrs. Thrall suffered with sickness for years, was shut out of from the life of the world to a great extent but made many friends with those who had the pleasure of knowing her and her death brings to them a profound regret.

The funeral of this estimable lady will be held Thursday morning at 10 o'clock from the St. John's Catholic church of which she was a most devout member during her lifetime.

A VERY NARROW ESCAPE FROM SERIOUS INJURY

From Wednesday's Daily.

Ray Hitchman, who is employed at the Ford agency of T. H. Pollock on South Sixth street as a machinist in the repair department, had a very narrow escape from serious injury this afternoon while he was engaged in brazing a gasoline tank that had been brought in by Phil Becker for repairs. Mr. Hitchman had failed to remove the plug from the tank to let out the accumulated gas from the gasoline that had formerly been stored in the tank, and while he was bent over the tank engaged in work the explosion occurred and the tank was hurled several feet, and Ray had his hair on the left side of the head scorched by the blaze from the tank. It is very fortunate that the injuries were not more serious however to the young man.

This afternoon at Boston before a record breaking crowd the Red Sox of the American league again annexed the championship of the world, by a score of 4 to 1. Ernie Shore did the pitching for the Sox, while the Brooklyn Dodgers used Pfeffer in the box until the eighth inning, when Dell relieved him but was unable to win. This leaves the series four to 1 in favor of Boston.
