

ALL GUARDSMEN HOME BY MARCH

Predict Withdrawal of Pershing's Troops and Release of State's Militia.

Washington, Jan. 14.—The United States militia men will be back in their homes by March 1, and General Pershing's column will be on the American side of the border.

The United Press learned these facts today from the most reliable sources. Only unforeseen difficulties or disasters will halt this program.

Moreover, this government will establish a closer medium of communication by sending Ambassador Fletcher to his Mexico City post. The date for this is uncertain, but probably will be within the next week or ten days.

The war department is ready to move Pershing's command on a moment's notice.

General Pershing himself has his men ready for the 150 mile march northward within a few hours after he gets the order.

Monday the American-Mexican peace commission will hold its first session in New York, and afterward official announcement of the withdrawal and militia removal plans will probably be made at once.

The militia troops will move as rapidly as possible, but the question of full transportation may mean several weeks before all will be returned.

The plan, as outlined by war officials, will be to start some of the militia men home as soon as Pershing's forces are under way, though it was said perhaps his actual arrival at the border may be awaited before entrainment of the bulk of the militia is undertaken. A start will probably be made next week or the week following on the troop movements.

This government had contemplated withdrawal of the Pershing column under a protocol between the United States and General Carranza.

Carranza has failed to sign, so the plans have been completed without his approval, though officials make it clear that the withdrawal is by no means a result of anything Carranza has said or done.

The dispatch of Pershing into Mexico following the Columbus raid last spring, with subsequent sending of militia to the border reinforcements now an outlay of about $70,000,000 to $80,000,000. This figure, however, includes pay of regulars and cost of equipment, much of which would necessarily have been on the books, expedition or no expedition.

Army men held tonight that the quick dispatch of the column had given the northern Mexicans an object lesson; and that there will be no more big raids across the border, though, naturally, there may be cattle rustling and minor attacks.

Any big concerted raid, however, according to army men, will mean measures even more drastic than heretofore.

Officials hope Fletcher's assignment to Mexico City will mean establishment of better relations between the two governments.

They hold that Carranza's persistence against odds augurs well for a gradual growth of Mexico to a place in the sun, though she is now far from such position.

JOINT INSTALLATION OF THEIR OFFICERS

Saturday afternoon the members of the Grand Army of the Republic post and of the Women's Relief Corps held their joint installation of officers at the rooms in the court house and a large number of the members of the two patriotic societies were present to take part in the impressive ceremonies. Mrs. Elizabeth Straight acted as the installing officer for the Relief Corps and T. W. Glenn for the Post and the impressive ritualistic ceremonies were carried out in a most pleasing manner.

For the Grand Army the following were installed: Commander, W. H. Freese; senior vice commander, Asbury Jacks; junior vice commander, Justus Lillie; Chaplain, Thomas Wiles; adjutant, R. B. Windham; officer of the day, W. B. Porter; quartermaster, T. W. Glenn; guard, Wm. McCauley.

The officers of the Relief Corps installed were, president, Mrs. Val Burkle; senior vice commander, Mrs. Alice Cowles; junior vice commander, Mrs. Frances Purdy; chaplain, Mrs. Julia Thomas; treasurer, Mrs. L. B. Egenberger; secretary, Miss Ella Kennedy; conductress, Mrs. James Lee; guard, Mrs. Asbury Jacks; patriotic instructor, Mrs. George Dodge; press correspondent, Mrs. Elizabeth Straight; first color bearer, Mrs. J. C. Peterson; second color bearer, Mrs. Lizzie Gobelman; third color bearer, Mrs. Catherine Wiles; fourth color bearer, Mrs. F. G. Egenberger.

Following the installation ceremonies the ladies of the corps proceeded to serve their members as well as the Grand Army with a tempting luncheon that was very much enjoyed by everyone and the ladies in their distribution of the dainties remembered the court house officials whose offices were located on that floor of the county building.

The lessons that these two patriotic societies teach to the growing generation certainly entitles them to the respect and admiration of the American people as they keep alive the spirit of sacrifice and love of country that has made the great republic, and the Plattsmouth branches of the order are very active in this line.

WILSON EXPECTS TERMS OF PEACE

United States to Indirectly Ask Conditions if Berlin Delays Further Negotiations.

Washington, D. C., Jan. 13.—A statement of terms from Germany and her allies at least as comprehensive as those set forth by the entente in replying to President Wilson's note is the next move hoped for here in the peace negotiations.

Whether time will be allowed for the Teutonic nations to state their terms on their own initiative or whether President Wilson will make some move to give an opening remains undetermined.

There are indications, however, that if no statement of the Teutonic terms is forthcoming within a reasonable time, the United States may seek a means to indicate the desirability of such a course.

President Undecided. It was reiterated today that the president had not determined on his position and it was pointed out that in his note he said he was indifferent to the means employed for comparing terms.

He is reluctant to judge between the two replies and has not made known his impressions of the entente note. In other administration quarters it has been suggested, however, that the objects which the president had in mind could best be demonstrated now by the central powers publicly declaring their own terms.

Allies' Indignation Abated. Officials are watching particularly just now the trend of public sentiment abroad and the apparent change since the dispatch of the president's note has proved a source of increasing gratification.

The first feeling of indignation among the allies because of the coincidence of the president's proposal with that of the central powers has abated, it is believed here, and is being replaced by a conviction that good may come of the American note.

No Early Peace. There is no indication in official circles, however, that an early peace is thought probable.

On the contrary the statement of the allies' objects, it is recognized, has made acceptance by Germany very difficult for the present, however far it may have gone toward establishing a preliminary basis which may facilitate peace negotiations when the end of hostilities does come. The administration is acting on the assumption that bitterness engendered by the war cannot be healed in a moment but that every step toward that end brings a final approachment nearer.

First expressions of bitterness in Germany over the entente reply are somewhat discounted here and it is felt there may be a change of sentiment just as there were in the entente countries in regard to the president's note. It is conceded, however, that for the present popular desire for a prosecution of the war will be quickened.

Expect No Terms. The German view here is that there is little likelihood of a public statement of specific terms by the Teutonic allies at this time, unless a further move to that end is made by the president. Should a request for such a statement be forwarded to Berlin, however, it is declared Germany probably would comply.

It has been the contention of Teutonic diplomats that, in proposing a peace conference, Germany fulfilled the president's suggestion that an early occasion be sought for discussion of terms and that no other step is called for unless there is a second and more specific request.

TAKE TROUBLES TO WASHINGTON

Railroad Representatives to Appear Before Commission Following Landis' Decision.

Chicago, Jan. 14.—Representatives of the railroads left tonight for Washington to appear before the interstate commerce commission Monday in an effort to have the recent order, that discriminating rates between Chicago and St. Louis be readjusted before January 15, extended indefinitely.

The action of Federal Judge Landis today, refusing to enjoin the state public utilities commission from prosecuting the railroads for violation of the 2-cent law, leaves the railroads without a leg to stand upon.

If they carry out the order of the federal commission and revise their intra-state tariff Monday, they will break the state law, besides being in contempt of Judge Landis. On the other hand, if they fail to do so, they will be in contempt of the national commission's order.

Judge Landis' decision, which virtually denies the right of the interstate commerce commission to order rates that conflict with intra-state rates, is of national moment. Rate revision in more than a score of states, which now have the 2-cent passenger tariff hinges upon the outcome of the case.

The case will be appealed directly to the supreme court. If the lower court is upheld and the commission's finding that rates to border cities are discriminatory is not rescinded, the railroads will be forced to adopt a nation-wide 2-cent passenger rate they state.

MRS. WILLIAM MORLEY SUFFERS A SERIOUS FALL

This afternoon shortly before 2 o'clock while Mrs. William Morley was crossing Main street in front of the store of E. G. Dovey & Son she was unfortunate enough to slip on the ice in the center of the street and fall to the pavement, striking on her left side and injuring the left limb quite severely. She was carried into the Dovey store and a hack called to take her home where the injured member was dressed. It was some time before medical assistance could be secured and it is impossible at the hour of going to press to state whether the injury is a dislocation or a very severe sprain as it is evident that the bones were not broken and it seems more in the nature of a sprain.

WILLIAM PANKONIN A CALLER.

William Pankonin, one of the substantial farmers of this vicinity, called last week to renew his subscription, and remained for a short visit. Mr. Pankonin is a pioneer farmer, having lived in Cass county the past forty-six years, coming here from Kalamazoo, Mich., in 1870. In speaking of early days, with their ups and downs, he said he had sold corn at 10 cents per bushel, and hauled it to Plattsmouth at that, there being no market in Louisville then, and there were only three houses between here and Plattsmouth. Mr. Pankonin has prospered and he and his wife could well afford to retire from active life, but they have a beautiful home where they are happy and contented and they feel that they do not care to leave it. He is now 79 years old, but looks twenty years younger.—Louisville Courier.

LIES IN STATE IN THE CAPITOL

Removed From There to Vault to Await Final Burial on Look-out Mountain.

Denver, Colo., Jan. 14.—The west today did honor to the memory of today did honor to the memory of (Bill).

From the moment the body of the scout and hunter was brought into the state capitol building to lie in state until it rested in the vault of an undertaker to await final burial on the summit of Look-out mountain all honorees were accorded to the dead plainsman.

Two state governors, a lieutenant governor, officials and legislators from three states, the United States army, fraternal organizations of which he was an honored member, formed cowboys, the Grand Army of the Republic and men, women and children—thousands of the brave—paid tribute to the illustrious son of the prairie. Most Picturesque Figure.

"Colonel Cody was the most picturesque figure in American history," declared John W. Springs, Denver millionaire and friend of Colonel Cody, delivering the eulogy of the "Sage" service. "His achievements were household words throughout the land. He was truly the American come-builer, blinding the trail to the virgin west."

Colonel Cody's body was brought into the state capitol building at 9:50 o'clock this morning. It lay beneath the dome of the capitol, from the flagpole of which the Stars and Stripes floated at half mast. Troopers from Fort Logan formed lines through which the people passed.

When the big doors of the building were thrown open the crowd poured in. There were hundreds of boys and girls among the throngs.

Crowd Still Coming. At 12 o'clock, the hour set for the closing of the casket, the crowd still was coming.

The public was held back while the family bade the colonel farewell. In the family party was "Johnny" Baker of New Rochelle, N. Y., who was with Colonel Cody in his wild west enterprises for many years.

Following the family a delegation of Palestine Commandery No. 13, Knights Templar, from North Platte, Neb., passed the bier. Afterwards marched a delegation of former cowboys. "Good-bye, old pard," "Good-bye, Bill," were some of their greetings.

The guard of honor at the casket included delegations from the Colorado National Guard, the Pioneer society, the Elks and the Grand Army of the Republic. One member of the detachment from the last named organization came across the plains with Colonel Cody. He was David Rankin of Denver.

The public again was admitted at 12:10 o'clock for twenty minutes.

A line extending more than a block shivered in the cold wind, waiting for a chance to enter. Twenty-five thousand persons passed by the casket, according to an estimated count.

And singularly, with it all, the ways of the circus and the show ring were present to the last.

"Step lively, please; big crowd behind," cried the master of ceremonies. "The circus was in to the end," said an old-time showman.

Colonel Cody lay in a huge bronze casket, dressed in a frock coat and with badges of the Legion of Honor and Grand Army of the Republic on his breast. The casket bore this inscription:

"Colonel William F. Cody, 'Buffalo Bill.'"

An American flag was draped around the casket. The funeral procession through the downtown streets was led by city policemen. Behind was the caisson on which rested the casket.

Noted Persons Present.

Among the distinguished citizens of this city and other states in motor cars were Julius C. Gunter, governor of Colorado; John B. Kendrick, governor of Wyoming; Edgar Howard, lieutenant governor of Nebraska; the secretaries of state of Colorado and Wyoming, legislative delegations from Nebraska, Colorado and Wyoming and Elks from Kansas and New Mexico. seventy cowboys walked. All had known Colonel Cody. Two of the cowboys led Colonel Cody's horse "McKinley," riderless and with the plainsman's pistols hung from the saddle horn. Several thousand persons followed the remains to the Elks' home, where the funeral services were held. Several hundred, unable to gain admission, stood two hours outside to view the body at the close of the services.
