AN "AMERICAN" CONGRESS.

Says the New York World, generally regarded as the most influential democratic newspaper in the United States:

"What difference does it make whether democrats or republicans organize the house of representatives in the congress which is to meet on April 27.

"If the United States is going to war with Germany in defense of fundamental rights at sea, there ought to be one party in all this broad domain. If there must be two parties, let one be outspokenly American and the other plainly German.

"Better a house of representatives controlled at once by republicans who are first Americans than a house of representatives wrangling for weeks in a narrow partisan way over an organization which at least must be either American or German."

"Many leading republican newspapers are taking the same stand. It is hard to see how any intelligent and loyal American can take any other stand. And yet there are congressional leaders of both parties who are still working and hoping to effect a partisan organization of the house, for the supposed glory and profit of the republican or democratic party, in spite of the fact that efforts to hold the party organizations together may result in a deadlock of the house, a paralysis of the government and disaster to the nation.

"At a time like this there should be no democrats or republicans—and no independents, widdling a perilous balance of power. There should be only one party in congress as there is outside of it—the American party. And if any congressman undertakes to play politics when congress assembles, he should receive a prompt and effective chastisement at the hands of his constituents."

THE DOOM OF DYNASTIES.

The troubles in Spain reported in the dispatches are another indication that the doom of the dynasties in the world is approaching. It is being said in the workingmen's organizations and among the common people over all Europe: "The head devils began this war, none of the other causes assigned for it nor all of them in combination, could have produced it. It was the monstrous egotism that certain families ruled by divine right." The claim is being made that the war was begun because the dynasties saw their thrones endangered by the rising tide of democracy. Even in England, where the king is only a figurehead having not even the shadow of power, the rising tide may sweep even the hollow form away. There has been protest made in the English press against those forms and it has frequently been said that it is about time, when the king addresses parliament or issues proclamations, to cease talking about "my army," and "my navy."

A document said to have been widely distributed in Spain, Germany, Austria and Italy, makes the statement that there can never be permanent peace in Europe until all the monarchs are overthrown and the countries become republics. When the people rule and the government is of the people, by the people and for the people, they will not go to war any more. There may be internal wars, revolutions and changes in government, but there will be no secret diplomacy and foreign wars. This may be the document referred to in the dispatches which is causing the troubles in Spain. There are several kings out of a job in Europe at the present time and there may be more in the near future.—World-Herald.

BEING WELL BORN.

It is safe to say that those who laugh at eugenics have no thought for future generations—they are taken up entirely too much with their own-selves and the present only.

There is no question about defective persons breeding defective persons.

Then why not get acquainted with the science of being well born? At present the government is doing its share of the good work along this line. It shows that the population of the United States increased about 11 per cent, between 1904 and 1910, while the number of persons in insane asylums during the same period increased 25 per cent. A single family of defectives cost the state of New York in five generations over one million and a quarter dollars. When it is realized that not only mental but also physical traits such as deaf mutism, color blindness, gout, short sightedness, alcoholism, epilepsy, imbecility and insanity may all be transmitted to offspring, the importance of this work to the public health and public pocket book is readily seen.

The prevention of the propagation of defectives may be controlled by the education of parents so that they will endeavor to prevent a union of their children with children of defective families; legislation requiring a medical certificate of parties applying for marriage licenses, and surgery which aims to render defectives incapable of procreating. Indiana, Wisconsin and California have laws permitting such operations.

The segregation of defectives has not proven practicable; in fact in the case of deaf and dumb, it serves to increase rather than to decrease their number.

Talk up eugenics—it means an increased knowledge of heredity, and that means an increased power in the prevention of the creation of degenerate and insane persons on the one hand and normal, efficient people on the other. Talk it up.—Hastings Tribune.

PLEDGES TO BE KEPT.

There is no need to get excited, vindictive and abusive over the discrepancies between the senate and house prohibition enforcement bills. The points at issue will be nicely ironed out in conference. The legislators know that it is up to them to provide a measure in accord with the amendment.

But this uproar about the repudiation and breaking of pledges is specious. This legislature is under no pledge to do anything other than stop the manufacture and sale of intoxicating liquor as a beverage within the state. It is under no pledge to summarily restrain any man from having liquor, in any amount, in his own home for his own or his family's consumption. In fact the pledges of the recognized champions of both sides of the amendment fight were that there would be no rigid interference with the personal privilege of consumption in moderation by the individual voter in his home.

There was no pledge to institute a reign of terror, with spy systems and inquisitorial processes. There were express pledges that there would not be. There was a pledge that bootlegging would be outlawed and punished. There was no pledge of interference with home consumption in no way tainted with sale and barter. There were pledges from the dry forces that there would be no such interference.

The people voted to summarily stop the manufacture and sale of liquor as a beverage, to destroy the saloon and the bootlegger and to put the liquor interests out of politics. That was what friends and supporters of the amendment proclaimed as its meaning. They declared specifically that it would impose no irksome restrictions upon the man who drinks liquor in moderation but does not make or sell it.

The legislature has the facts well in mind. Senators and representatives know what their pledges are. They will keep them as they made them. They will not exaggerate them nor evade them, no matter what intimidation or misrepresentation may be attempted.

And the obligation to respect pre-election pledges is common.—Lincoln Star.

CONGRESS TO GIVE POWER TO WILSON

Extra Session Will Probably Favor War on Germany.

RESULTS TO BE FARREACHING

Members Have Seen the Handwriting on the Wall and Will Not Vote Against the President's Wishes and the Demands of the Public in General—Patriotism Blazes Forth.

By ARTHUR W. DUNN.

Washington, April 2.—[Special.]—It is predicted that the session of congress just commenced will be the most momentous in the history of the country. The men who make the predictions are those who are given to filling space in the newspapers and who have been much impressed with their point of view. Being near by, it looks big to them.

Of course it is an important session. It is an extraordinary session, called to make war on the most military nation the world has ever produced. That makes the session epoch making. The results which follow may be far-reaching. We know where we are going in, but no one can tell where we are coming out.

As Wilson Wishes.

This extraordinary session of congress will declare war or declare a state of war exists or give the president certain powers. It will be in regard to what the president wants.

There were many words spilled during the short session of the last congress on the sole right of congress to declare war. Of course that is true, but when the president tells congress to declare war or pass a more mild declaration it will do so.

Have Seen the Handwriting.

Within a month members of both house and senate have seen a lot of "handwriting on the wall." They have seen what happens to those who go contrary to the wishes of the president at a time like this, a time when public sentiment has been aroused and patriotism blazes forth in a demand to stand by the president.

Having seen the handwriting, the congress will heed. President Wilson will have his way.

Will They Remain Dry?

There has been a great deal of discussion since the passage of what is known as the Reed bone dry legislation as to whether certain states that have voted dry will remain in that condition. In view of the drastic law which is intended to prevent the importation of any kind of liquor into states that have voted for prohibition. Already there is considerable talk about the number of prohibition states reversing their position and voting wet when there is another election. The liquor people believe that few states that have not yet voted prohibition will ever go dry under the new laws.

There is also some question whether even the Reed bone dry amendment will be obeyed. It takes a little more than law to change the personal habits of people, and public opinion has as much to do with the enforcement of a law as the officers. It has always been a noted fact that violations of law which has no strong public opinion behind it are usually winked at by officials in such communities.

Throwing Scares into the Populace.

They have thrown a great many scares into people since this trouble with Germany began, but it is nothing like as serious as it was early in the Spanish war. At that time the entire Atlantic coast became panic stricken, and governors of different states and mayors of different cities insisted that the coast be patrolled from the Florida keys to the Canadian line.

At this time there is the possibility of submarines lurking in the Atlantic ocean near several big cities, but they are not deemed as dangerous as would be a ship which could sail close up and shell the different cities. In 1898 the submarine was not a factor in naval warfare, and in some way the people along the eastern seaboard are not as afraid of submarines as they were of the phantom Spanish fleet of 1898.

One of Those Horrible Thoughts.

"Suppose," remarked a man who has been in our foreign service, "that after we declare war and are at war with Germany that country should make peace with some allies and whip the others. What would be our position?" That is one of those disturbing thoughts which are thrown out from time to time.

"It is not improbable," he went on, "that Germany may win in the end. She has lasted much longer than was ever believed possible, and no one can foretell the final outcome."

Two Months of Disfigurement.

For one grand display, for one great holiday, one day or period of illumination, the city of Washington is disfigured for at least two months. In order to make the last inauguration like every other inauguration various stands were erected along the public streets and in all the public places, and the last vestige of them has not yet been removed. A month was occupied in disfiguring the city while these stands were being erected, and another was occupied in their removal. All this was done for one grand display on the 5th of March.

 Mr. R. H. Jones.
 Mr. Henry Maxwell.
 Mrs. Hazel Miller.
 Miss Etta Smith.
 Above mail unclaimed, and will be sent to the Dead Letter office April 16, 1917. D. C. MORGAN, Postmaster.

Some Good Advice.

"Don't think too much of your own methods. Watch other people's ways and learn from them." This is good advice, especially when bilious or constipated. You will find many people who use Chamberlain's Tablets for these ailments with the best results, and will do well to follow their example.

NOW AT THE HOSPITAL.

It is with regret that the many friends of John N. Schwartz, the veteran Nebraska painter, will learn of his indisposition and illness. Mr. Schwartz has not been feeling the best for some time and has at last decided to take treatment at the St. Joseph's hospital in Omaha, going to that city yesterday. He will remain there a few weeks taking treatment. The host of friends of this genial gentleman will regret very much to learn of his condition and trust that he may show improvement in his condition before returning home.

J. W. Lowther came up this morning from his home south of the city and departed on the early Burlington train for Omaha to spend the day.

STRAYED MARES.

From my farm near Union, four head in all. One 2-year-old bay with stripe in face. The other three branded on each hip with the open B brand. Information leading to their recovery will be rewarded and all damage paid. L. J. HALL.

THE CELEBRATED

-JACK-

will make the season of 1917 at my home in Cedar Creek Nebraska, for service every day.
 Derby is an iron gray Jack, eight years old, stand 15 hands high and will weigh 1000 pounds. He has an excellent reputation as a sure foal getter. He is without doubt one of the best jacks ever brought to Nebraska.

BARNEY!

Barney, the Black Breton Grade Stallion, will make the season with Derby.

TERMS: For Derby $15.00, and for Barney $10.00, in both cases insuring colt to stand and suck. Parties disposing of mares or removing from the community, service fee becomes due and payable immediately. All care will be taken to prevent accidents, but owner will not be responsible should any occur.
