MOVING OF TROOPS A DIFFICULT TASK

Transporting Army Across the Sea Requires Gare and Skill.

FIRST ESSAY A FINE SUGGESS

Bafe Landing of Contingent In France Encourages Hope For Future-Transport Service May Be Taken Over by Navy-Implication That Nation Is Drifting Toward Autocracy.

By ARTHUR W. DUNN.

Washington, July 14.-[Special.]-Those who realize just what an effort it was to land the first contingent of American troops in Europe-the care, the attempt at secrecy, the necessity for safe convoy, etc.-may be able to get some idea of what it will mean to land 500,000 men in France. It is supposed that only a small number of men were landed for the first expedition. Of course everything will work better in the future, but the people can see that going to war is a very serious business, particularly going to war 3,000 miles across the water.

A Navy Problem.

When the bill was passed providing for temporary officers in the navy is was expected that quite a number of merchant officers would avail themselves of the opportunity to become naval officers. But it is not going to he easy to get such officers to leave their present duty and enter the navy The pay of civilian officers for mer chant and transport ships is so high that naval service is not alluring. Cap tains of big ships get $10,000, while naval captains get $5,000. Other offi cers' pay is correspondingly high. And in the matter of crews there is the same difference. Sailers on merchant men get $100 per month for the same $30. That makes it difficult to get mer to enlist in the naval service.

There is a suggestion that all th transport service needed for the army and navy will have to be taken over

Autocracy and Socialism.

Those who take a real gloomy view of the situation, those who see im mense powers conferred upon the president to be exercised by men whom we may appoint to administer the laws, are of the opinion that we are fast drifting toward two things-autocracy and socialism. There is an impiled opinion expressed in the debates on the bills which have been pending in congress that autocracy is ahead of socialism and the present war is going to leave the United States with its affairs largely centered in one man and those whom he selects as his subordi-

But the war will not last forever, and many of the laws will end with

It Isn't What They Say.

Senators sometimes betray their feelings by what they do rather than what they say. When Senator Vardaman had read a telegram he had sent to a constituent in Mississippi in which he said that the "good ship Probibition had been submarined by the president of the United States" the senate made no audible comment, unless laughter could be called comment. Nearly every senator, even the most solemn members of the body smiled broadly. Then a lot of them from time to time went over and slapped Vardaman on the shoulder or laughingly exchanged comments with him.

"Wise Old Head."

It was Senator Reed, the frequent orator of the senate, who interrupted Senator Page of Vermont and said be would like to know what was in that "wise old head." He paid quite a tribute to the sagacity of the Verwouter, who is a business man and not a lawyer, who does not talk long or often, but who always has the respectful attention of the senate when he has anything to say.

Against Decorations. The first attempt to allow an American official to accept a foreign decoration met with strong opposition. It is well known that if our troops are sucpessful in Europe, if they perform efficient service and their officers achieve distinction, the foreign governments will offer to convey their appreciation by offering distinguished orders and decorations. And so the first attempt, that to give Minister Brand Whitlock a decoration, met opposition. "This congress might as well now protest against anything of the kind," said Congressman Emerson of Ohio. "The title business is one in which the rich daughters of America have a monopoly. The wealthy girls without brains

FORGED ANTIQUES.

Even British Museum Experts Have Been Fooled by Them.

The "antiquity" manufacturer is a man who thrives on expert forgery. Furniture, prints, china, pictures, plate, tapestry-he imitates them all most successfully. Each man has his specialty. One devotes himself to old leather jacks, another produces horn books, a third turns out "medieval" MSS.

But in the height of his innoceuce the forger had given the frieze lu its present ruined condition. The exhibition of the cup was received with shouts of laughter. - London Standard.

Effect of Bad Teeth.

A paper by a dental surgeon in the Journal of the American Medical as sociation, tells the story of bad teetli and the effects on the laboring man's efficiency. The dentist said he made 30,000 examinations in sixteen months of 17,000 Americans and 13,000 foreigners and found 96 per cent in need of dental service. "In 30,000 mouths," the dentist said, "we find 60,000 cavities and 18,000 extractions necessary. 78,000 in all.
