BARNUM & BAILEY CIRCUS IS COMING

Once again the glad tidings are being spread broadcast telling of the coming of Barnum & Bailey's circus. The greatest show on Earth, it is announced, will positively be exhibited within easy traveling distance this season and, as usual, a large percentage of the population will declare a holiday to visit the show.

The big circus will exhibit in Omaha on July 30.

It is promised that nothing to compare with the present Barnum & Bailey performance has ever before been seen under canvas. New and novel features have been imported from abroad. A program of events, thrills, national and screamingly fun, occupy every instant in three, four stages, the rigging of the hippodrome surrounding for more than three hours.

There is a new and gorgeous pageant entitled "Aladdin and His Wonderful Lamp," in which nearly 1,400 persons and one thousand animals appear in magnificent costumes rivaling the dress of the people of the famous "Arabian Nights" story. This will be followed by a host of acts in all parts of the great enclosure. There will be sixty clowns, a greatly increased menagerie of wild and untamed animals, four great herds of elephants, several caravans of camels and many several baby animals.

The free street parade, which will start from the circus lot at 10 o'clock on the morning of circus day, is entirely different from anything of the kind ever shown before. It will be three miles in length and there will be bands on foot, on horseback, and riding on top of wagons of red and gold. There will be six bands in all and they will be assisted by three steam callions and an electric piano.

With the largest tent in the history of all circuses, the Barnum & Bailey circus wagon promises this season to make good again its boast that it is the Greatest Show On Earth. Five railroad trains, comprising 89 railroad cars, will be required to transport its paraphernalia, and more than 750 horses will be used to transfer its wagons from the railroad yards to the show lot.

'THE NEGLECTED WIFE'

FILMED BY PATHE

Literally, millions of people have read the stories of domestic life, which Mabel Herbert Urner has been contributing to the press of the country for several years past. They have been so intimate that they have won a warm place for themselves in the affections of countless readers.

Realizing this popularity, Pathe has visualized Mrs. Urner's work in motion pictures. The result is the photo-play serial, "The Neglected Wife." The scenario was developed by WILL M. RITCHIE.

The leading parts are played by Ruth Roland and Roland Bottomley supported by a cast which includes Corone Grant, Philo McCullough, Daniel Gilfeather, Mollie McConnell and many other well known players. The production is made under the direction of William Bertram.

"The Neglected Wife" is in fifteen episodes of two reels each. The story is a natural one, such as might happen in any family; and no doubt, many men and women watching it unfold on the screen will be surprised how near their lives have been paralleled by the writer. While it does not depend on thrills to grip, there are some big effects in each installment. At the Airdome, Friday.

PERSHING'S SPRINT

A Foot Race Forced by the Taunt of a Navaho Indian.

IT HAD A CURIOUS CLIMAX.

The Redskin Athlete was a Fleet Runner, but the "White Captain," in Spite of a Sprained Ankle Handicap, Won the Contest in a "Crawl."

At the time General John J. Pershing held the rank of captain in the army he on one occasion proved himself superior to the best Navaho athlete in a foot race.

The story is an interesting one. Pershing was stationed near the Navaho and Moqui reservations in Arizona. In 1890, when General Morgan, then commissioner of Indian affairs, visited these Indians, Pershing was in command of a small escort which went with him to Keams' canyon to attend a council of the tribes. He was accompanied by Captain Chauncey Baker, who had been his classmate at West Point.

While waiting for the council to begin they sat on a large stone watching the Indians at their games. The Navahos were wrestling, racing on foot, racing their ponies and pole vaulting. It was a holiday occasion, and the Indians were enjoying themselves hugely.

One finely formed Indian saw Pershing sitting on the stone and, approaching, said something to him in the Navaho tongue. The Navaho interpreter, Chee, who was with the party, was asked what the Indian wanted.

"He is challenging Captain Pershing to wrestle with him," said Chee. Pershing looked the Indian over and observing the grease upon his body replied to Chee:

"Tell him that he is too dirty to wrestle with a white man."

When this was interpreted the Indians who had gathered around sent up a shout of derision at the expense of the Navaho athlete. The latter was not slow to reply, saying:

"Tell the white captain I'll run a foot race with him, and if I am too dirty all he has to do is to keep ahead of me."

The Indians now laughed at Pershing, and Chee explained to him that he would have to run the foot race or lose caste with the Indians, who appeared greatly to admire him.

Pershing accepted the challenge and preparations were made for the race. A triangular course was laid out, with three stakes 100 feet apart. Pershing stripped to the waist and put on a pair of moccasins so that he could run with greater ease.

Judges were chosen and a toss of a coin gave the Indian the inside track, so that he had a few feet the advantage in clearing the stakes. Both men started in lively fashion, but, as Pershing afterward explained, he purposely kept just far enough behind so that the Navaho could barely see him out of the tail of his eye. This prevented the Indian from setting too hard a pace and at the same time enabled Pershing to use the Indian as pace-maker.

As the two sped toward the first stake not a foot's difference was discernible between them. They appeared to be running almost abreast. Once or twice the Indian made a spurt, but Pershing always kept up with him and never undertook to pass him.

They rounded the first stake with the Indian still on the inside and then started for the second stake. When half way Pershing increased his speed and the Indian, fearing that he meant to try to pass him at the stake, did likewise. Just as Pershing expected, the Navaho shot slightly beyond the stake, and Pershing was enabled to come on the inside, thereby gaining an advantage of several feet on the homeward run.

Now, Pershing had previously sprained his ankle, and his only concern in the race was caused by a fear that his ankle might give way. The speed of the two men as they ran for the home stake was tremendous, but Pershing maintained the lead until the expected happened.

When within about ten feet of the home line his ankle turned and he was seen to fall in a heap, and the spectators breathlessly watching the contest cried out in consternation. It all happened in a moment, it seemed, but somehow Pershing doubled up like a ball and turned a complete somersault and landed across the line several feet ahead of the Indian.

Then there was a bedlam of shouting. The Indians unhesitatingly pronounced Pershing the victor, and the elation of the white men was only exceeded by their solicitude for Pershing's weakened ankle. The defeated Indian was jeered and taunted unmercifully by the other Navahos.

They had one particular collection of Indian unpronounceables which they applied to him. Pershing and Baker got Chee to interpret it. Chee explained that the Indian had always been called the Navaho athlete, but now his comrades had lengthened his name and were calling him "the Navaho athlete who was beaten in a foot race by the white captain crawling."—New York Sun.
