BENEFIT FOR RED CROSS.

Flags, Flags, Flags, everywhere they were in evidence last night at the Woodman Circle dance given by Mrs. W. E. Rosencrans, and the decoration of the hall, being in charge of Mrs. M. E. Manspeaker, while Mrs. Lena Droege, the hustling deputy of the order was instrumental in gathering together so large a crowd of Plattsmouth young people. The hall was finely decorated with flags on the walls, on the windows, on the banisters, the columns, supporting the balcony, and even the electric light dependencies were trimmed in the National colors, and with a red cross on each wall, denoting the purpose for which the ladies were all working. Each office of the Woodman Circle have in their turn to give some kind of an entertainment, and last evening was the one for Mrs. W. E. Rosencrans, and well did she succeed in the achievement of the idea and purpose of the order. Selecting with care her assistants, she had every appointment working in perfect unison. The decorations were fine and denoted a great deal of work and study in the designing and execution. The music furnished by a class of stars, was just what was desired, and the applause which greeted each number on its conclusion, was evidence of the manner in which it was received.

There was a large crowd present when.

"Music arose with its voluptuous swell.
All went as merry as a marriage bell."

The happy young people danced and laughed and chatted, as the hours fled away, and no one could but enjoy themselves, for all felt the pulsations of the music in and out among the dancers. "On with the dance let joy be unconfined.
No rest till morn, when youth and pleasure meet;
To chase the glowing hours with flying feet."

WRITE THOSE SOLDIER BOYS.

Take it to yourselves. If you were down there where you did not know but a very few people, being suddenly taken away from the scenes with which you are familiar, and no one with whom you were acquainted to associate with very much, would you not like to get a letter from home? Of course you would. Such a letter would put pep in you and cheer you up when, perhaps things were looking blue. Now you who are here, try and write a letter, even if you have to write one every day, it will do no harm. You remember how you used to write to that sweetheart or lover every day and did not think anything about it, but if she or he missed a day you thought that was something awful. Now help these boys by showing them you take enough interest in their welfare to write to them and to want to hear from them. It is a little thing to you but a big one to them. Write them letters—do it now, and keep on writing. Cheer them up; it is your bit. DO IT.

THEY DEPART FOR THE NORTH.

Ebersole will accompany them, and after visiting for a time there will return to Plattsmouth. Messrs. Zuckweillers are taking with them an equipment for their farm in the shape of machinery, that will enable them to go to work at once, have loaded into their car among other things, a tractor, with plows, for working the sort, which they purchased through D. B. Ebersole, and when they arrive and have gotten settled in their new home will be ready to do what work there is to do this fall, and will save the rush of spring work so common with the farming interests, and which in a measure can hardly be avoided as the work has to be done in the season for it. While the citizens of Plattsmouth will dislike to lose these excellent citizens they wish them unbounded success in their new home.

RETURNS FROM THE EAST.

Victor Sherwood, and wife returned last evening from the east, where they have been visiting for the past two weeks, at the home of a sister of Mrs. Sherwood, Mrs. John Lewis, at Central Station, Virginia. Mr. Sherwood says that during the time they spent there they had an excellent time, but he would not like to make his home there, as the place is very hilly and country rough and mountainous. But he says the people live finely. Mr. John Lewis, has a farm containing about two hundred acres, which he farms, and at the same time has a lease with a company who produce oil from the land, paying twenty-five dollars per month for the use of the same as well as farming it besides. This twenty-five dollars per month, is only paid for the time when the wells are being tested, and afterwards a meter is put on the pipe line, and one-eighth of the output is paid for. Before the meter is a branch line which goes to the house which furnishes fuel for the stoves and furnace. Mr. Sherwood speaks of his liking the fruits of that country and especially the chestnuts and pawpaws.

George R. Reynolds, who is a brother of Mrs. W. T. Milburn of this city, and who visited here but recently was so pleased with this city, country and state, that when he returned to his home at Paola, Kansas, he told the people there what impressions the visit had made on him. Here is what the Miami Republican, a paper published in his own town has to say about his trip to Nebraska:

George R. Reynolds returned home Tuesday from a trip of three weeks to Nebraska, visiting his sister, Mrs. Allie Milburn, at Plattsmouth and also visiting Lincoln, Omaha and other cities. He says Nebraska is a wonderful corn state and the crop is good there this year. He saw 5,000 acres of sweet corn, grown for canning, and wagon loads of it on the way to market. Dairying is a great industry there and is making that a rich state. Hay, corn, cream and hogs are the sources of great incomes and good dragged dirt roads everywhere make travel easy. He attended the State fair at Lincoln and says it is the greatest State fair he ever attended. He is much impressed with the resources and prosperity of eastern Nebraska and was thoroughly pleased with his visit.
