LAID TO REST YESTERDAY.

From Friday's Daily.

Yesterday at his late home was held the last sad rites over the mortal remains of the late lamented W. R. Fox, the Rev. H. G. McCluskey officlating. The home was over crowded and many who wished to pay their last respect and honor to the excellent citizen of Plattsmouth who so recently passed to that great beyond one went home until the midnight from whence no traveler returns.

With a very pleasing and touching address Rev. McCluskey paid tribute to the life and character of Mr. Fox. The weather being cold it was with a considerable suffering that those who were present were able to go to the cemetery. The Benevolent and Protetive Order of Elks marched to the houre in a body to render houor to a departed brother. The pall care to play cards, the lounging bearers who tenderly deposited the room with its Victrola was a pleasbody of W. K.
