

BRYON ARRIES WOUNDED IN FRANCE JULY 19TH!

Plattsmouth Boy Receives Wound In Battle;
Particulars Not Obtainable At This Time,
Information Will Be Given As Received.

Washington, D. C., Aug. 7, (10:00 A. M.)
Alexander M. Arries, Plattsmouth, Nebr.,
Regret to inform you that cablegram from abroad, advises that Corporal Byron E. Arries Marine Corps was wounded on July nineteenth. No further particulars available. Official cablegrams cannot be sent asking about his condition, but you will be notified should further details be received.
GEORGE BARNETT,
Major General Commandant.

The above telegram was received this morning by A. M. Arries telling of the wounding of his son. All know Byron E. Arries, and one of the fine young men of Plattsmouth, everybody will be grieved at this sad news and hope that the wound is not serious. How it is no one knows, and from the wording of the telegram it leaves one only to guess how seriously the wound is. This is the first of the many boys who have gone from this city and county to have been reported wounded. Byron was where the fighting was the hottest, and a member of the Marines that stopped the onslaught of the Huns, in their drive towards Paris. Mr. Arries and wife have the sympathy of all the citizens of this city, in this time of sorrow, and uncertainty as to the exact conditions. With the good constitution and the exemplary habits of this young man, we are certain that he will with a half a show, show great recuperative qualities, and will unless the wound is very severe recover. What the facts are, no one can surmise, until that time when more definite information shall have arrived. We are hoping for the best in the case.

WERE GOING WITH THE TIDE.

From Tuesday's Daily.
Yesterday two young men by the name of Clarke, not Lewis & Clarke, but just Clarke & Clarke, the son of Harry Clarke who is the salesman for the O. K. Garage, in their wanderings about the city found their way to the river bank, and getting into a skiff, which was lightly teetered to the bank, in some way dislodged the boat, and the mad current catching at the frail craft in its glee, soon had it dangling on the bosom of the 'Big Muddy' like a cockle shell, and the boys who are about six or seven years of age, frightened badly. They shouted good and loudly, their cries heard by Ferryman, John Richardson, who with another boat, soon had overtook their runaway craft, and landed them safe at land. He then took them in his car and took them home.

This adventure may be looked upon as a light matter, but there is a great danger of the loss of life of these two young men, as annually this river claims a number of lives. The river front is not the ideal playground for unattended children. It is supposed these boys will have received a lesson, for it was only a chance they have escaped from the hungry waters of the Missouri. Not alone these boys, but all young boys can find a much safer place to play than on the river front.
