THE GREAT LOVE PROVES THAT WAR LEVELS ALL RANKS

Noble Women of Britain Assist in Production of Big Griffith Play.

If the time-worn saying, "Love levels all ranks," be true, the newer one, "War levels all ranks," is doubly true. This is plainly shown in David Wark Griffith's special production for Artcraft, "The Great Love," which is to be played at the Parmele theatre Friday and Saturday.

This remarkable picture was filmed in the homes and on the country estates of several of the titled families of England, and the "actors" in many of scenes are members of the nobility, who have given their all to the prosecution of the war, turned their magnificent homes over to the government for hospital purposes and sacrificed every thought of self, every indulgence in pleasure, to aid and to do their part in the great struggle for human liberty and freedom from autocratic despotism.

This remarkable photoplay reveals the awakening from a lethargy that had been produced by the conditions in the "piping times of peace," bringing out the wonderful character and nobility of purpose, the self-immolation, the letting down on the bars of caste on the part of the noble families of the Empire. Chief among the high social celebrities of England, who are conspicuously shown in this photoplay, are Queen Alexandra, Countess Masserene, Lady Lavery, Lady Diana Manners, reputed to be the most beautiful woman in England, Miss Elizabeth Asquith, daughter of the former Prime Minister of England, Lady Paget, the social dictator of London, and many others. The chief roles are in the hands of Lillian Gish, Robert Harron and Henry B. Walthall.
