HINT TO FARMERS
ON LIBERTY LOAN

JUDGE WADE OF IOWA SUGGESTS HOW THEY MAY DETERMINE THEIR SUBSCRIPTION.

TEST OF THEIR PATRIOTISM

Present Sacrifices Not Comparable to Those Made During the Civil War—Durbin of Indiana Hits Roosevelt's Presidential Boom.

By ARTHUR W. DUNN.

Washington.—An idea was advanced by a government official recently in regard to the coming Liberty loan which ought to be considered carefully by people in the rural districts, particularly those who live on farms. Judge Wade of Iowa was responsible for putting the idea into the heads of government officials. His argument to the farmers in regard to the Liberty loans is this: Let every farming community, say an agricultural county, figure up just what its taxable valuation is in the matter of wheat, oats, corn, barley, rye, cattle, hogs, horses, sheep and poultry. Let every individual farmer take stock of what his tax returns are for these various articles which are produced on the farm and of which the surplus is sent to market. Then let him consider what was the cash value of his stock and produce before the war, and also figure what that stock value is now. Let him consider just what he is making out of the war, and then if he doesn't have an idea that he'd better put some of the profits into Liberty loans he is lacking in that patriotism which is supposed to exist throughout the agricultural communities of the United States. It has often been claimed that, whatever else may happen, the honor of the United States will always be sustained by the patriotism of the agricultural classes. In this coming Liberty loan campaign there is an opportunity for the farmers to show their patriotism by subscribing to the full extent of their means.

The sacrifices which the people are making now are small compared to those they made in the days of the Civil war. Said a woman whose husband was in the war, and who is now a very old lady: "My husband served as a soldier in a Minnesota regiment. I had three small children. We had to live on his pay of $15 a month and such other resources as we could get out of a farm on the frontier. While my husband was away in the South a fierce Indian war broke out in our state and we were driven from home and lost everything. Afterwards my husband was very severely wounded and when he came home was unable to do any kind of work. Our situation was similar to that of thousands, but we never heard any complaint of the government, and all this time our energies were bent upon supporting the government and saving the Union."

Former Governor Durbin of Indiana came to Washington and put a spoke in the Roosevelt presidential wheel which was revolving very rapidly up to that time. Durbin had a conference with a number of Republican senators and representatives and he told them very frankly that Roosevelt would not do. It is supposed that he talked to men who sympathized with his views. Durbin suggested that either Senator Weeks of Massachusetts or Governor Lowden of Illinois would make an acceptable candidate and thought they would poll the full Republican strength. Speaking of Roosevelt, he said: "If Roosevelt should run against President Wilson he would be the worst beaten man that ever was a candidate for the presidency." Of course Durbin would modify that somewhat, but it is supposed that he meant since the Republican party was organized. He probably failed to recall that in 1912 Taft received only eight electoral votes. It is yet a little too early to have presidential booms get well under way.

Senator Phelan of California has been "up against it" twice lately in regard to legislation. He made a very strong and earnest plea to exempt wines from the Sheppard prohibition amendment, but was unable to convince the senate that the wine industry of California should receive any consideration at a time when prohibition was being enacted for the avowed purpose of conserving fruits and grain of the United States for food supplies. While the draft law was under consideration Phelan made an unsuccessful effort to secure the repeal of a provision in the last military appropriation bill which provides that army and navy officers may accept decorations and honors from foreign governments. It was quite apparent, however, that no one cared anything about the bestowal of these decorations, for Phelan could not even get the yeas and nays on his amendment.

Senators freely predict that there will have to be stringent legislation to enforce the work-or-fight idea in this country. The senate debated this question several days when the new draft legislation was being considered and by 74 majority voted for a work-or-fight amendment. When the test came, however, the senate surrendered to the house and left the amendment out of the law.

HAIG TAKES 10,000 CAPTIVES AND 60 GUNS

French Advance Southeast of Great Fortress and Repulse Furious Enemy Assaults Near Soissons—Fall of the Stronghold Daily Growing Nearer—Mutual Artillery Shelling on Lorraine Battle Front.

Thursday saw both the British and French armies in Picardy materially develop their plans for the eventual envelopment of St. Quentin and Cambrai.

The British made further gains around Gouzeaucourt and east of Epehy, while the French, striking southeast of St. Quentin, brought the southern part of their nipper into a better position for the squeeze against the town, which daily seemingly is growing nearer.

The French reached the outskirts of Betsy. The important town of Contescourt was taken. Castres was also captured.

Huns Keep to Trenches.
More than 10,000 prisoners and in excess of sixty large guns fell into the hands of the British during the big operation begun by Field Marshal Haig Wednesday northwest of St. Quentin.

In addition extremely heavy casualties were inflicted on the Germans in the frontal attacks and during violent counter attacks made by them in an endeavor to recoup their losses of ground.

So badly was the enemy hammered during this fighting that he did not attempt on Thursday to stir from his trenches, except near Epehy and Gouzeaucourt and to give listless battle on isolated sectors to the south.

Northeast of Soissons the Germans are counter attacking vigorously against the allied forces holding strategic positions which are threatening the high ground along the Chemin-Des-Dames, which the enemy hopes to save as a temporary haven of refuge in the event of a forced retirement from the west and the south.

Enemy Everywhere Repulsed.
Notwithstanding the strength of the onslaught the French everywhere repulsed the enemy.

Likewise south of the Aisne, in the region of Courland, the Germans endeavored to beat back the French but again met with defeat, the French artillery cutting the attacking waves to pieces.

On the Lorraine front there has been mutual artillery shelling, but no infantry engagements. A raid attempted by the Germans against General Pershing's men northwest of Pont-A-Mousson came to naught.

Slaughter Terrific.
With the British Army in France, Sept. 19.—The entire British operation about St. Quentin has grown into a brilliant and important success which was not forecast in the original limited plans. Not the least important feature of the victory was the slaughter inflicted on the enemy forces, particularly during their frenzied counter attacks, when they were mowed down like wheat with the machine guns, or swallowed up in a maelstrom of crashing shells from the British barrage.

On the right flank there was especially bitter fighting about Hoinon village. The British had captured part of this place the day before, but the Germans still held a section of it, with machine guns trained from every house.

These had to be cleared out, and this had to be done systematically by small parties who dared the hostile fire and bombed the Huns out of their hiding places.

Fight At Close Quarters.
A far more serious engagement was waged east of the village, where the Germans had constructed a quadrilateral trench system, which was heavily armed.

Here the contending forces struggled throughout the day at close quarters.

The British toward evening gained a footing in the trenches and continued to press the attack during the night.

Does your back ache constantly? Do you have sharp twinges when stooping or lifting? Feel all used up—as if you could just go no farther? Why not look to your kidneys? Why not use Doan's Kidney Pills? Plattsmouth people have done so. They tell you the result.

Mrs. Hettie Cummings, Chicago Ave., Plattsmouth, says: "I suffered so severely from my back at times I could hardly get about. When I got down, I had to take hold of something before I could straighten. Sharp pains often caught me across my kidneys and for a minute I couldn't move, the pains were so severe. I couldn't rest well, my back ached so badly. I tried different remedies, but nothing did me any good until I began using Doan's Kidney Pills. Three boxes overcame that awful misery in my back and made me feel like a different person."
