MAKING OUR OWN DYES AND POTASH

UNITED STATES NO LONGER IS DEPENDENT ON GERMANY FOR THOSE ARTICLES.

KAISER'S BOAST IS FOOLISH

Necessity of Case Prevents Giving Commands in New Army to Men Who Have Deserved Promotion on Other Side.

By ARTHUR W. DUNN.

Washington.—When the war first began the Germans believed that the United States would force an open highway between Germany and this country because of the necessity for certain supplies and materials which we had been obtaining from Germany. The most important of these were dyes and potash. But the Germans made a mistake there as they have in other calculations. It has recently been shown that nearly $500,000,000 has been invested in plants and factories for manufacturing dyes, and that we are now about as well off as before the war began.

NO PARTY VOTING ON WAR MEASURES

DIFFERENCES OF OPINION NOT BASED ON PARTISANSHIP IN ANY SUCH LEGISLATION.

POLITICS IS NOT AFFECTED

Race Issue in Congress Practically Is Abandoned Now—Bill to Extend Agriculture May Not Become Law for Some Months.

By ARTHUR W. DUNN.

Washington.—It was not needed any real announcement, official or otherwise, to adjourn politics so far as war legislation is concerned. One of the very best features of the participation of the United States in this great war is the fact that there has not been a single partisan vote cast on any war question. That is to say, while there has been a difference of opinion in regard to a number of measures that have been presented for the prosecution of the war, these differences of opinion were not based upon party lines in any manner whatever. Both Republicans and Democrats voted for the war declaration; both voted against it. Democrats and Republicans voted for the conscription bill, and Democrats and Republicans voted against it. And so it has been with all of the important war measures that have been presented. There has not been a vote upon party lines on any measure affecting the war.

OBITUARY.

From Saturday's Daily.

Agnes Catherine Lowther, was born December 18, 1853, at Carpenter, Ohio. Died Oct. 28, 1918, at the home of her son Jesse Lowther at Coleridge, Neb.

Deceased had been failing in health the past ten years, due to a stroke of paralysis. June 26, 1918 she suffered a second stroke of paralysis from which she suffered almost constantly until God relieved her pain and called her to her reward. The funeral services were held at 2:00 o'clock P. M. Thursday, Oct. 31, at the residence of Jesse Lowther, and the remains were conveyed to the Coleridge cemetery where she was laid to rest. The funeral services being conducted by Rev. Handel Collier of the M. E. Church of Coleridge.

Mrs. Lowther, whose maiden name was Mark first opened her eyes to the light of day in Meigs county, Ohio. She grew to young womanhood amid the familiar scene of the old home where she was united in marriage in 1875 to John W. Lowther of that place. To this union was born five children, all of whom with the father survive to mourn the loss of the loved one.

The children are Jesse and A. J. Lowther of Coleridge, Neb., A. S. Lowther of Wayne, Neb., Mrs. Irma Brown of Valentine, Neb., and Mrs. J. A. Root of Murray, Neb.

Mr. and Mrs. Lowther resided in Meigs County, Ohio, until 1899 when they moved to Cass county, Neb., where they resided until the spring of 1918, when they removed to Wayne, Neb. Mrs. Lowther was a kind wife and a loving mother, for whom all her friends and neighbors had great respect and love, and her life since girlhood has been consistent with the teachings of the Christian church of which she became a member in early life.

ANNOUNCEMENT.

I wish to announce to the public that on Nov. the ninth, I will sell at the barn in Pacific Junction, Iowa, 100 head of Big Type Poland, including 11 fall yearlings that farrowed litters this fall, 17 head farrowed last of February, 17 head farrow in May, and the balance of the 100 head will be from this fall litter. In dispersing my herd of big type Polands, I am giving the swine raisers an opportunity to secure breeding seed that would be hard to equal in this part of Iowa.

I am offering sows that have been tried, and proven worthy of a place in the best herd.

They are the large kind that produce the big type, and if you don't want to raise the big kind, don't buy these hogs.

You will be able to buy hogs at this sale that would not be offered for sale if I wasn't dispersing my sale. Write for mailing list. Yours for better swine,

J. R. HODGES.
Bartlett, Iowa.

Secretary Lane recently made this important announcement: "The United States does not need German potash." The secretary of the interior then went on to explain that the kaiser's boast that all countries will have to depend upon Germany for potash after the war is an idle and false statement. Nearly a quarter of a million tons of potash came from Germany each year before the war, but when the United States found herself cut off she went to work and looked up the potash fields, and it is now found that we will have an ample supply not only during the war but after the war. And so not only was Germany fooled into believing that America could not get along without her while the war was going on, but she will find that America will get along with out her after the war. This war is going to be a very costly thing for the German people. They ought to be able to take an account of stock and see what the Hohenzollerns have cost them in prestige and prosperity.

There is a tremendous lot of disappointment among the friends of soldiers who have already gone "over there" because the latter have not been considered for appointment as officers in the new armies that are now being raised. Naturally we would all like to see the men who have done such good service in beating back the Huns, and who have made good, get the commissions and official positions in the new army. By the same token it would seem that the men who have devoted their lives to the military service ought to be preferred over those who went in when the country was called to arms. But solid fact intervenes to prevent rewarding either the army officers who have been fitting themselves from boyhood for just such a crisis, or the men who were first to volunteer, or were first drafted and have gone over and become mighty good soldiers.

The necessity of the case forces the raising of an army and officering it from available men. At the beginning the regular army officers could not all be taken from their regiments and commands. Nor is it possible to take the soldiers who have by splendid service won the right to have a commission and bring them back here and make them officers in the new army that is being raised. In a country like this where we did not keep a large standing army we must work with the material at hand and as we raise new armies we must create officers for them. If the army were fighting here at home it would not be such a task to transfer soldiers who have earned promotion and make them officers in the new army, but we cannot bring them back from France and then send them back again to that country. The men who are organizing the present army must do the best they can.

Mrs. Warren, wife of Senator Warren of Wyoming, would like to know the newspaper man to whom she is indebted for a fine trip to the sea coast. She says that for two weeks she read nearly every day in the papers about what she was doing on the boardwalk at Atlantic City while sojourning at one of the very fashionable hotels of that delightful resort. "All the time that this was taking place," said Mrs. Warren, "I was out in Wyoming riding horses on the ranch, and in other ways enjoying myself. What I would like would be to get those splendid gowns in which I appeared on the boardwalk and at the hops. I shall miss them very much."

It was a historic occasion when President Wilson drew the first number in the eighteen-to-forty-five draft lottery. Many high officials were on hand, as well as photographers and moving picture camera men. But no one would have thought so, looking over the scene an hour later. Porters were removing the chairs that had been occupied by the government officials, and the highest remaining official in sight was an army officer calling out the numbers as they were drawn from the bowl. That is one thing about Washington. So many historic functions here that people have the time and desire to be present at only the most important part of the proceedings.

House bill 11045 is having a most interesting history. Introduced four or five months ago as an emergency war measure, it has been knocking about in the senate and house ever since. This is the bill which is intended to stimulate agriculture and appropriates about $12,000,000 for that purpose. It has had very "hard sledding," to use a Northern expression, and the end is not yet in sight. It has been severely criticized as a rather useless measure and has had several important amendments attached to it, the most important being the one which makes the country bone dry after the 1st of June next year. Then it is also the bill which carries an anti-trust-protefting proposition for the District of Columbia, over which there has been a controversy for six or seven months. And now there is a possibility that the house will be without a quorum until after the elections. So it is quite likely that this "emergency" measure will still drag along for two months more before it is finally passed.

For nearly three months Senator Borah has been persistent in one thing, and finally his persistence has been rewarded. "He has been trying to have printed the report of the federal trade commission which so severely criticized the meat packers. He has been thwarted time after time, but finally he got unanimous consent to have the report printed.
