We gotta win, hear me,
(I knew you would cheer me)
The road that will lead us in—
Just take and lead us in—
To old Berlin."

It is all over, and glad of it.
To the lucky ones—congratulations.

To the unfortunate ones—may you do better next time.

Now for home and the prosecution of the war.

A great many Germans have been interned who should have been interned.

Paragraphers never let any material go to waste. They even utilize the Berlin squeal.

We are paying for that extra hour of daylight last summer now with an extra hour of electric light.

Germany still burns towns as she retreats. The only thing to do is to take her matches away from her.

The Kaiser wishes the German people to understand that he loves them so that he never will desert them, and besides he has no other job in sight.

"Car Sped on Without Stopping," says a familiar headline. This should be a warning to pedestrians not to get themselves run over on non-stop corners.

It's all over, but its no use getting too hilarious these war times. We all should stand by President Wilson just the same—democrats and republicans alike, as they no doubt will.

Another of those totally helpless situations is when you start telling your favorite story in your own inimitable fashion to the fellow at the next desk, and a brass band outside strikes up "Over There."

"Conserve coal this winter," warns the fuel administrator. Yes, if you don't conserve coal at its present price you are likely to become the subject of an examination before a jury in the probate court.

We approve heartily of the idea of a League of Nations, and trust that Germany will be so thoroughly frazzled out that it will be safe to admit her to some sort of non-resident membership at least on probation.

While many believe Prince Maximilian should be sent back to the insane asylum, where he used to be, others hold that to begin on him would be an injustice, when so many others in Germany need attention worse.

The extreme austerity of this department is well known, but if it should happen that the war, the flu and politics should all be adjourned in one week, we probably could manage to forgive anybody who couldn't resist celebrating the glorious event, even if he went so far as to celebrate it with a taste of California cordial.

Now we know what is really meant by an Envoy Extraordinary!

Turkey got into the war for what she could get out of it and all she got was out of it.

Something is putting a resounding boom into the familiar boomerang of politics.

Anyhow, there can be no peace until Colonel House has had time to make complete arrangements.

No matter how congress stands politically, it will stand by President Wilson as long as he is right.

Thanksgiving Thursday, November 28. The ones who have anything to feel thankful for are fortunate.

As an example to show low wages generally are in Germany, plumbers in that country make only $1.13 a day.

Dr. What's-his-name, the Kaiser's dentist, doesn't say so, but it seems possible that he may have pulled Wilhelm's wisdom teeth one absent-minded day.

Now that the Liberty Loan has taken our last dollar, we trust none of it will be expended in cabling to Germany any other words than "unconditional surrender."

As the total amount of bread allowed to a meal is limited, what possible difference can it make whether it is served first, last or in the middle of the feast?

They are saying now that Hindenburg was merely Ludendorff's figurehead. The Kaiser should find out whose figurehead Ludendorff was and court-martial that person.

Emperor Charles not only wishes to avoid all conflict with the Austrian populace, but reports of his flight indicate that he wishes to avoid all contact with it.

Germany is trying hard to look as if she wished to become a democracy. But even if a leopard could change his spots, he would probably be the same old leopard underneath his hide.

Some people get excited on the eve of the election and say things they should not have said and it will pass over after the smoke has cleared away, but the wilful and malicious liar is unpardonable.

And then you doubtless know the fellow who, when you asked him for a match once, gave you a whole box of safety matches, and then has been coming around borrowing one of "his" matches ever since.

"Avoid crowds," warned the flu doctors. Then don't faint on the street if you don't want to be the nucleus of a crowd of two hundred in less than a minute. The rubber-necks know no health regulations.

It is believed the German book-sellers have practically given up trying to get their money out of shelfworn copies of Bernhardi's "Germany and the Next War," and are turning to books like "The Simple Life," in the hope of breaking even.

Every letter from France tells of the great need of women workers to help take care of the soldiers, yet the patriotic women whose homes have been broken up by relatives going to war and are freest to go find every obstruction thrown in their way, when they apply for permission to go.

GERMAN MONEY HIDES.

Germans and Austrians are busily sending what money and securities they have left to Switzerland and Holland for safe keeping. They foresee a day of reckoning. Perhaps it may become necessary for the future league of nations to issue search warrants and unearth the tainted German money—to purify it by putting it to work in the restoration of Belgium, France, Italy and Serbia.

Quite probably, too, the wealthy German begins to fear his own people. The Boche analogue to the Bolshevik will not be a gentle or pretty creature, if he ever really gets up spirit enough to revolt. He will make a mess of things that would cause the Russian horrors to look trivial.

KING ALBERT.

From the hearts of millions of Americans there goes out to King Albert heartfelt joy and congratulations at the rapid recovery of his tortured kingdom. As he enters his cities in triumph the plaudits of his subjects are echoed from every hamlet in this great land. Democratic America loves the hero King.

Some months ago Albert was discussing with friends a project in which the cooperation of the people of this country was needed. For some time the best method of securing this cooperation was discussed. Finally the King said: "I think I have some influence with General Pershing and will ask him to undertake it for us."

America loves Albert because, like Victor Emanuel II., he proved himself "the honest King," because he preferred to sacrifice a kingdom rather than his honor, because when civilization hung in the balance he risked his all to save it, because for four long years he has suffered that the cause of right should not perish. Modest Albert needs no mediation in any request he has to make of the American people. There is no name which has for them more magic, perhaps more weight than his.

OUR OWN SHAME.

How can any one read former Ambassador Morgenthau's story of what the Turks and Germans did to the Armenians and still remain without shame that we have not declared war on Turkey? From the first there has been plenty of legal, political and diplomatic ground upon which to base such a war. Our own citizens have been outraged, our property rights invaded, our flag insulted; and the Turk has been the willing ally and arch supporter of our chief enemy. Why are we still "at peace" with him?

Now comes the full moral incentive to action. We have read the story before; it is not new. But here it is given from sources beyond possibility of impeachment, beyond any charge of partisanship, either racial, religious or political. Mr. Morgenthau is no sensation-monger. He speaks with the fulness of official knowledge.

The excuse that a declaration of war might bring further harm to some Americans and to American property still in Turkey is not sufficient. The other excuse that we might gain some diplomatic advantage in the final settlement is equally feeble. Turkey will not be admitted to any peace conference as an equal member. The Turk will be one of the criminals at the bar. We shall gain nothing by maintaining our "friendship" with him. And if we could, what shall it profit us if we thereby lose our own self-respect and know that we have failed to take our stand on the side of humanity, decency and right?

WHY THE ANXIETY?

It is, to say the least, curious that certain publicists and newspapers in this country find Mr. Wilson's handling of the diplomatic exchanges with Germany so much less satisfactory than do public men and leaders of opinion among our allies. In his effort to aggravate an awkward

Almost any man will tell you that Sloan's Liniment means relief discussion in the senate, Mr. Roosevelt says:

"We ought to make it clear to the world that we are neither an untrustworthy friend nor an irresolute foe. Let us clearly show that we do not desire to pose as an umpire between our faithful and loyal friends and our treacherous and brutal enemy, but that we are a staunch ally of our friends and a staunch foe of our enemy."

Editorially The Tribune says: "Germany hopes to trade a military defeat for a position in peace discussions based upon President Wilson's conditions. That, as we said yesterday morning, would be a political triumph for Germany. She may not succeed. The allies have yet to be heard from."

In the same issue the Tribune prints Associated Press correspondence from Paris containing the following:

"The feeling prevails in general among French officials that the latest note from the president of the United States is just what the allies have been wanting to force upon the enemy."

And from London: "The text of President Wilson's reply to Germany is given great prominence in the evening newspapers, which quote with satisfaction his decision to refer the question of an armistice to the allies and his insistence that the only armistice must be one which will make a renewal of hostilities on the part of Germany an impossibility."

The Pall Mall Gazette which even Mr. Roosevelt would find difficult to identify as pro-German or pacifist, said:

"Any fear that the president's deliberate method of dealing with the German overtures betokened a mitigation of the allies' demands and the foregoing of their complete victory, will be banished by the concise and inflexible terms of his crowning rejoinder."

Lord Robert Cecil, naturally speaking for the British government, declared in the house of commons Thursday that there need be no anxiety as to harmony existing between America and the other allies.

Probably Cecil meant that there was no occasion for such anxiety on that side of the water. But if not on that side why on this?—Wall Street Journal.

The Jews of Omaha are solid for Wilson.

Take your time, Wilhelm, about that abdication. You are on the rack—not we.

If it was considered patriotic to fly the Stars and Stripes at the outbreak of the war, surely it is even more fitting to see that it flies in the season of victory.
