PATER SATANAS.

One by one he's beckoning His darlings to their reckoning— Teens of the German wife, And Ferdinand of fragrant life, Kaisers Karl and Bill sans Shame, And good old Sultan What's-His-Name.

How about that turkey? Thanksgiving will soon be here.

Does the Boche really believe we are to be so easily fooled? Hope is the bill of fare from Belshazzar's feast donated to Lazarus.

Germany wants peace, or, more poetically speaking, respite and repentance.

These tidal waves come so often to the party in power. And perhaps there is a cause for them.

The mind can weave itself warmly in the cocoon of its own thoughts, and dwell a hermit anywhere.

How much money was sent into Nebraska by German propagandists to elect Norris? Don't all speak at once.

It looks like a mild winter, as most of the blankets on the Fords are unusually light for this time of the year.

Why is it that none of Those Song Writers has yet produced anything containing the line, "My Little Polka Polka?"

It may be all very well to admit Germany to membership in a League of Nations. . . but a Germany in which the Hohenzollerns and Junker gangs have ceased to be the dominant factors.

The Kaiser seems to think he is safer with "his" army than in Berlin. Knowing what we do about the precarious situation of the army, we judge Berlin must be a fairly risky place to be in.

The race in Michigan appears to be finishing as most races do in which a Ford is a runner. It ran away from its opponent on the little hills early in the course, but on the final straightaway, superior horsepower asserted itself.

People quickly tire of the most wonderful sights. A chunk of ice sitting out on the front sidewalk these days doesn't attract a second glance. Last August a crowd would have gathered around to watch it the entire ten minutes it lasted.

After all the checking of the influenza epidemic is largely a matter of individual care. It is impossible to prevent absolutely the spread of the disease, for there are always "carriers" of an epidemic; persons infected with the germs, but who are themselves immune. But if there is universal observance of the rules suggested by health authorities both in public places and in homes where the disease exists, there is every reason to believe that the epidemic will be reduced to a minimum.

In 1848, when James K. Polk was President, the German government asked the United States for an experienced American naval officer of suitable rank to take command of the German navy. The Cabinet was unanimously in favor of granting the request, but Mr. Polk refused it. It looks now as if the project had merely been postponed.

The ties that bind come pretty severe on brothers who have never been separated for any great length of time. While not born in Plattsmouth Cliff and Hill Wescott virtually lived here all their lives. They have been associated in business together for over twenty-five years and Wescott Brothers' clothing emporium is a household word throughout Cass and adjoining counties. The going of Cliff to France is the first time the two brothers have been separated, and it was a sad parting when Cliff took his departure last Friday. They had made up their minds some time ago that one of them should go, and Cliff went. They are both good business men, and business at the Old Reliable will not in the least suffer at their parting, no matter how long the other brother may be absent.

ROOSEVELT AND THE NEW CONGRESS

It has pleased Mr. Roosevelt to adopt a form of partisanship which is Prussian through and through to the extreme of junkerism. While autoocracy in Europe has been crumbling he has been posing in America as one anointed with the holy oils of divine right. In his attitude toward the government of the United States and its conduct of the war he has been studiously insulting and malicious. He has belittled triumphs which have won the homage of every free nation and carried terror to the heart of the enemy. From the beginning of the war to the present hour of victory he has had no word of commendation for anybody but himself, no praise but his own brag-gart self-praise, no appreciation except for the easily moved throngs which have applauded his contemptible and all but seditious words.

The new congress will have to deal with the questions of peace and reconstruction. No doubt it will be assailed on all sides by the forces of reaction and greed, of which Mr. Roosevelt is the advance agent. No doubt, with a presidential election coming before the end of its term, the disposition to play politics will be pronounced. But whatever its nominal political complexion may be, we believe that its actual ruling majority will be made up of democrats and republicans who are first of all Americans, and that on every great issue involving the rights and security of the people, that majority, co-operating with the president, will be as much inclined to sink partisanship as the brave soldiers and sailors who under his leadership have helped mightily in conquering a just and glorious peace.—New York World.

FOCH.

We do not know what the judgments of military critics will be when they have carefully studied and sifted the evidence, but to a layman it looks as if Foch were not merely a great general but one of the greatest generals of all recorded history. . . as great a general as Napoleon or Caesar or Hannibal or Alexander. The armies of which he took supreme command in France last spring were inferior in number to the enemy. They were beaten and in retreat. He organized the western front in the face of a flushed and triumphant foe that had pressed almost to ultimate victory, and found time to co-ordinate the battle in France with the operations against the Bulgarians, the Turks and the Austrians in a scheme the magnitude of which has never been equaled before in this planet's wars at least. By the time American recruitment had given him an equality of forces in France he had already passed to the offensive, using not only the men he had, but assigning the men who were to come to their places in the vast plan of battle. An ordinary general, even with American numbers assuring him equality, and the superiority, in numbers, might conceivably have managed his resources less deftly and surely; but the essential genius of Foch's achievement lies in the fact that he found a way to make all the great pushing weight of his new recruits felt even while they were on ship-board and in the training camps; his blows increased in force and rapidity as new unit increasing numbers were ready for battle; he flung all the momentum of the forces that were to be here tomorrow into today's action. When he turned and stood and struck back at the Germans the plan on which he struck already took into account the Americans whom he might employ in the near future.—New York Evening Sun.

Full of Cold: Had the Grip. Many will be pleased to read how Lewis-Newman, 506 Northrand St., Charleston, W. Va., was restored to health. He writes: "I was down sick and nothing would do me any good. I was full of cold. Had the grip until I got two 50c bottles of Foley's Honey and Tar. It is the best remedy for grip and colds I ever used. Sold everywhere."

ROBERT PATTERSON DIES IN THE SOUTH

WAS FORMERLY A CITIZEN OF THIS COUNTY, AND SOME FORTY-TWO YEARS OLD.

From Wednesday's Daily. News was received here Monday of the death of Robert Patterson of Sweeney, Texas, where he has been engaged in the banking business for some time past, from pneumonia, super-induced by Spanish influenza. Mr. Patterson was born in this county a few miles south of this city forty-two years ago, and was the son of Silas Patterson, and a nephew of Fred Patterson, of this city, and was second cousin, of T. M. Patterson, R. F. Patterson and Mrs. T. H. Pollock. For some time he was engaged with his father in the mercantile business at South Bend, and later went to San Francisco, where he was engaged in the banking business.

His father, Silas Patterson, having become interested in some lands in Texas, Robert Patterson closed out his interests in San Francisco, and went to Texas, where he has lived since. He was taken with the flu, and which later turned into pneumonia, resulting in his death Sunday. He was unmarried. The remains have been shipped to Lincoln for interment, the funeral occurring at that place today.

T. M. Patterson, president of the Farmers State Bank and R. F. Patterson, cashier of the Bank of Cass County, departed this morning for Lincoln to be in attendance at the funeral this afternoon.

The regular teachers' examination will be held Saturday November 16th, 1918, at the following points in the County: Louisville, Weeping Water, Elmwood and Plattsmouth.

ALPHA C. PETERSON, County Superintendent.

Cut This Out—It Is Worth Money. DON'T MISS THIS. Cut out this slip, enclose with 5c to Foley & Co., 2335 Sheffield Ave., Chicago, Ill., writing your name and address clearly. You will receive in return a trial package containing Foley's Honey and Tar Compound, for coughs, colds and croup, Foley Kidney Pills and Foley Cathartic Tablets. Sold everywhere.

For earache, toothache, pains, burns, scalds, sore throat, try Dr. Thomas' Eclectic Oil, a splendid remedy for emergencies.

Do not let that dollar rust. Uncle Sam can use it. Invest it in a Liberty Bond.
