will be able to use her arm whereas before she was hardly able to use at all.

A fine nine pound baby girl was born to Mr. and Mrs. Wm. Brown on Tuesday evening Nov. 26th, 1918. Both mother and babe are getting along nicely and Daddy Bill walks as on nettles—as lightly as though he were thinking of flying, but his smile shows he is as happy as the happiest. The parents have congratulations of their friends.

Mr. and Mrs. Dan Steele received a sad message from the Adjutant General stating that their son who is with the forces in France has not been heard of since Oct. 5. This is something over six weeks. Of course it is hard to tell where he is or what has happened. We can only conjecture. This is hard for the parents and necessarily they feel great apprehension, but all that can be done is to hope for the best and that he may turn up safe at last.

Miss Josephine Rys, of Plattsmouth was the over Sunday guest of Miss Eleanor Heil.

Mrs. Henry Inhelder and two sons of Stanton, who have been here visiting her parents, Mr. and Mrs. Edward Ingram, returned home Friday.

"Bud" Wirth is home from Camp Funston to spend Thanksgiving with his parents. He expects to be mustered out of service about the first of the year.

Margaretha Emeline Stohman the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. Frederick Stohman, succumbed to an attack of Spanish Influenza Sunday morning, November 24, 1918, at 5:00 o'clock, after a week's illness.

Fred Myers was down town Monday for the first time since his recovery from the flu. He looks a little weak, but his many friends were very glad to see him able to be out again and hope he will regain his strength rapidly.

Ed. Jochem called Tuesday and advanced his subscription to the Courier to January 1, 1920. Ed was feeling happy over the arrival of a son at his home on Sunday, Nov. 24. The Courier extends congratulations to the happy parents.

The Spanish influenza seems to have taken on a new lease of life and a number of new cases have been reported within the past few days. The second intermediate room at the public school has been closed for a few days on account of cases breaking out in that room.

Rev. J. M. Delezenne writes us that he has been called to the pastorate of the First Christian church at Burlington Junction, Mo. This is 100 miles by auto from Louisville. He has been doing evangelistic work for some time, his family residing at Albany, Mo. He sends his best regards to Louisville friends.

W. F. Krecklow, the old-time blacksmith, has closed his shop and gone out of business on account of rheumatism in his arms caused no doubt by continuous hard work at the anvil. He expects to spend some time at Hot Springs, Arkansas, where he will try the baths with hopes of regaining his health. He has been in the blacksmith business in Louisville for eighteen years. His retirement leaves Louisville with but one blacksmith, Fritz Brand.

EAGLE

George Trunkenholz received his discharge and arrived home last night.

Raymond Norris was home over Sunday and paid Eagle a visit. He has been afflicted with the flu quite severely.

A new bank has been chartered for Eagle by parties living at University Place. We are not advised as to when they expect to open for business.

Mrs. J. H. Bloomenkamp, who is spending a few days with her brother-in-law F. W. Bloomenkamp, since her husband's death last week, is suffering from flu.

John Peterson left Monday for Omaha, where he will buy goods for a few days, after which he will go to Defiance, Ia., to spend Thanksgiving with his father and sister.

The many friends of Miss Ruth Ryons, formerly of Eagle but recently of Lincoln, were shocked to learn of her death, which occurred at the home of her parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. D. Ryons, at Lincoln last Sunday.

All restrictions have been called off on building operations, and the indications point to one of the most active building campaigns this section has ever witnessed. Many are planning improvements next year.

F. W. Bloomenkamp was called to Falls City last Friday by the death of his brother, Dr. J. H. Bloomenkamp, who died Thursday. He returned Sunday afternoon accompanied by his mother, Mrs. William Bloomenkamp and his sister, Miss Ida, of Hastings, and Mrs. J. H. Bloomenkamp of Barada, Neb.

George Scattergood and wife of Auburn, Ind., surprised his brother, H. S. Scattergood and sister, Mrs. McDonald, a few days ago. Mr. Scattergood will remain in Nebraska a month and on his return home will again fill the county assessor's office, having been elected to his second term. Mr. Scattergood was here 40 years ago and sees many changes in this county.

Mr. and Mrs. L. A. Hay went to Omaha Tuesday and brought home their son John, who had been in the hospital being treated for a shot wound from an accidental discharge of a .22 rifle. John is getting along nicely and was mighty glad to get home as he had a very close call.

Mrs. Mary E. Cowles left Tuesday morning for her old home in New York for an extended visit with her brothers and sisters. There are six of the children and the youngest one is seventy years of age. She will stop on the way for a visit in Illinois. Her daughter Mrs. Carl Day and husband accompanied her as far as Omaha.

We were a little alarmed over the actions of B. L. Philpot Tuesday but when we learned that the stork had visited his home early Tuesday morning and left a fine nine and one-half pound daughter to gladden the household our feeling of concern disappeared for we knew Bert would come out all O. K. after he gave vent to his joy.

NO ONE SUFFERED HERE.

The marvel of our voluntary food saving, now that we are "getting results," is that no one ever actually suffered any hardship from it; that we all are better in health and spirit and better satisfied with ourselves because of our friendly self-denial.

Food control in America held the price of breadstuffs steady, prevented vicious speculation and extortion and preserved tranquillity at home.

In no other nation is there so willing a sense of voluntary self-sacrifice as in America—that was shown in the abstention from wheat.

Find more wheat. It came; more pork, it came; save sugar, it was done. So Americans answered the challenge of German starvation.

Good will rules the new world as fear governed the old world. Through sharing food America helps make the whole world kin.

Food control made sufficiency from shortage, kept the rein on food prices, gave the nation's full strength exercise.

Starvation by Germany challenged all the world; food conservation in America answered the challenge.

WILSON WILL NOT BREAK PRECEDENT

NOT THE FIRST PRESIDENT TO LEAVE COUNTRY IN GOING TO PEACE CONFERENCE.

COULD BE REACHED BY WIRE

Pershing, Wood and Crowder Suggested as Presidential Nominees by the Republicans, in Case They Desire a Military Man.

By ARTHUR W. DUNN.

Washington.—President Wilson will not shatter any precedents by going outside of the United States while he is president. Theodore Roosevelt sailed away to Panama while he was president and so did Mr. Taft. Mr. Taft also went over into Mexico for a brief time. And there is no reason to become apprehensive that anything will happen to the United States while the president is away in Europe. There is one sure thing about a government. It goes on no matter what happens, particularly if it has got stability behind it. The business of the country can be transacted even if the president is gone for two or three months. A cabinet officer could decide all questions that really must be decided. And those things that are necessary to refer to the president can in these days of cable and wireless communication be transmitted to him and replies received without much more loss of time than it now takes to lay important matters before the president by department heads.

While it is somewhat unusual for the president of the United States to leave the country for the purpose of negotiating with foreign governments, these are unusual times, and Woodrow Wilson is an unusual man. In the language of one prominent Democratic senator who approved of the president's going to Europe on the peace commission: "This is the most wonderful thing that has ever happened in the world, this war and its conclusion, and it is very fitting that the president of the United States should participate in the proceedings which bring it to a close."

One election is no more than over before plans are being laid for the next. As soon as Woodrow Wilson was elected president the second time both parties began planning to carry the congressional elections in 1918. And now with the 1918 elections out of the way, they are already at work on the campaign of 1920. The preliminaries in the campaign of 1920 include the selection of a candidate. We naturally hear considerable talk about the Republicans naming a military man. The minds of people first turn toward General Pershing, who commands the American army in Europe. Then there are a great many people who talk of Gen. Leonard Wood, who is something of a martyr because he was not allowed to go to Europe in command of troops. One of the latest men mentioned in this connection, if a military man is to be named by the Republicans, is Gen. Enoch H. Crowder, who so successfully carried out the draft and mobilization of the army. Perhaps before the time comes to nominate a man for president there will not be such a desire for a military man.

One of the things which the war has settled beyond all question is the great contention of the United States which really caused this country to enter the war. It is that the seas must be free. It is doubtful whether any nation will again undertake to control the seas by marking off plots on a map and telling the rest of the world that it enters such marked-off zones at its peril. That was one of the many great mistakes which Germany made in the prosecution of the war.

Members of congress are probably more touchy on the point of attendance on sessions of the house than any other thing, except, of course, questions concerning their honor. Congressman Wingo of Arkansas is regular in his attendance, although he seldom makes a speech. The other day Leader Kitchin in an argument with Wingo asserted that he "ought to be present or ought to read the Record."

"I have been present more regularly than the gentleman from North Carolina," hotly retorted Wingo, and when Speaker Clark suggested that the argument was out of order, the Arkansas congressman took a parting shot. "No rule of this house," he said, "is going to keep me silent when those who are seldom here question my attendance."

Ice cutting is one of the conservation measures urged by the agricultural department with a view to increasing our food supply. That is a suggestion which might not interest the farmer in Florida or Texas, but it ought to be considered by those in sections where streams or other bodies of water freeze over in winter. In many cases, according to department officials, large quantities of ice could be stored and used to prevent loss or harm to various food products in summer because of heat. And it should be worth while to have some ice on hand to make a little something cool to drink, or possibly ice cream, or for use in sickness. At any rate the department likes the idea so well that a bulletin has been issued describing ways and means.
