AIR SUPREMACY TO THE YANKS

BAGGED EIGHT HUNDRED AND FIFTY-FOUR HUN PLANES IN WAR, LOSING 271.

End of Fighting Found 39 American Air Divisions at Front, With Personnel of 2,161 Officers and 25,353 Men, Reports Harbord.

Washington, Dec. 22.—American airmen in France brought down a total of 354 German airplanes, and 82 German balloons, against an American loss of 271 planes and 45 balloons, according to a report cable by Major General Harbord on December 15, and made public today by the War Department. Destruction of 354 enemy planes and 57 of the balloons had been officially confirmed.

The total casualties of the American air service in action are given as 442, including 109 killed, 103 wounded, 200 missing, 27 prisoners and three interned.

When the armistice ended the fighting, the report said, there were thirty-nine American air squadrons at the front. They included twenty pursuit, six day and one night bombardment squadrons, five army, twelve corps and one night observation squadrons. The total personnel was 2,161 officers and 25,353 men at the front with an additional 4,643 officers and 28,353 men in the service of supply. Eight American flying officers were detailed with the British army and 49 officers and 525 men with the French forces.

Up to November 15, General Harbord said, a total of 6,472 planes of all types had been received by the American air service in France, including 3,337 pursuit planes for combat work, and ninety for schools, 3,241 observation for service and 66 for schools; 421 day bombers, with 86 additional for schools, and thirty-one night reconnaissance machines. There were in addition 2,285 training, thirty experimental, and 103 miscellaneous machines.

C. P. McPherson and wife of Omaha arrived in this city this afternoon and will spend Christmas at the home of Mrs. George W. Rennie, the mother of Mrs. McPherson.

LOOKING AHEAD TO CAMPAIGN OF 1920

REPUBLICANS ALREADY TALKING OF VARIOUS POSSIBILITIES FOR THEIR TICKET HEAD.

MENTION SENATOR KELLOGG

President Wilson Shows Evidence of the Anxieties of Recent Years—Congressmen Have Reason for Not Meeting Until Noon.

By ARTHUR W. DUNN.
Washington.—The Republicans began their presidential campaign for 1920 as soon as they had won the congressional campaign of 1918. Just now there has been a considerable amount of casting about for candidates and many names are mentioned in the course of a week's desultory discussion. It is rather an interesting fact that people expect to see two ex-presidents with their "hats in the ring" in 1920. No one seems to doubt that Colonel Roosevelt will be very much in evidence at the next Republican convention, and there is now a growing feeling that Judge Taft might make a successful come-back race.

One of the interesting suggestions as to a Republican candidate came from a shrewd political observer on the Democratic side of the senate. He remarked that the Republicans would be likely to go West for a candidate in order to get the geographical support which a nomination of that kind would be likely to insure. In that case, he said, he rather expected the next Republican convention to turn to a man like Senator Frank P. Kellogg of Minnesota. Minnesota, he said, was a doubtful state, very close in the campaign of 1916. Kellogg has had a fine public record, both as a prosecutor of trusts and as a senator. Minnesota has never been considered as on the presidential highway, but almost anything is likely to happen in politics these days.

Those who were in the galleries of the house of representatives on the opening day of the session of congress looked down on President Wilson and noted that he was showing age. While spick and span in his absolutely correct clothes, it was noticed that strands of hair were combed across the top of his head, and if those strands had been removed he would have appeared as a bald-headed man, something that has never been thought of in connection with the president. Then it was also noted that his hair had turned gray very rapidly. It was evident that the worries of the past year or two have told upon him.

One innocent little resolution that is always among the first to pass in both house and senate reads like this: "That the hour of daily meeting of the house (or senate) be 12 o'clock noon until otherwise ordered." Candidates for seats in the two bodies, particularly the house, often rail at the late hour set by congress for its daily sessions. People "back home" are apt to think that a congressman can sleep until 11 o'clock in the morning and meander down to the capitol, where the wheels begin to move at noon and stop moving usually at 5 o'clock in the afternoon. But the new men who come to Washington filled with a burning desire to start legislating at 8 or 9 o'clock in the morning soon realize that for most of them legislating is the least of their worries. They are glad to have those hours before noon in which to attend to departmental matters for constituents.

Congressman Wingo of Arkansas had a bill authorizing the construction of a bridge in his district which he was in a hurry to have passed so that President Wilson might sign it before leaving the country. No one was opposed to the bill, but some of the Republicans were inclined to "kid" Wingo about his haste.

"The gentleman may recall," suggested Nick Longworth, "it has been the presidential custom to hand the pen with which he signed a bill for some favored project to the gentleman interested in it. How would the gentleman attempt to get the pen in this case?"

"I am willing, if I get the law, to let someone else have the pen," replied Wingo.

Congressman Greene of Vermont inquired if "the presentation of a bill to an empty White House is equivalent to giving it to a Democratic president?" But Wingo got his bill through, which was all he wanted.

Quite a number of American firms have been granted permission to use patents taken out in this country before the war by German concerns. There is considerable talk of how the manufacturers of this country quickly secured a substitute for the German dyes, which were admitted to be superior to those of any other nation. As a matter of fact, there is more than one good American firm turning out those same dyes in large quantities, because our government has given them the right to make use of the German process. The same idea has been applied to copyrights of books, etc. An opera was recently presented in New York under these circumstances and met with success.
