Those Baden villages need not expect to escape their part of the penalty by sneaking into the back door of Switzerland. We see them.

Of course a nation guilty of Germany's hideous crimes must endure the penalty, but isn't it just a bit harsh to subject them to the torment of the bagpipe?

Now it is said that Mr. Burleson does not favor permanent Government ownership of the cables. If so, why grab them? Is it a spirit of dissembled affection?

We are told that the Government has stopped the sale of gold to dentists. Is that good news or otherwise to the man who feels that he really ought to have that old tooth filled?

It doesn't hurt a boy's feelings particularly for the teacher to tell him the problems he worked are all wrong, but it does sort of jar his faith in all his established beliefs when the teacher tells him all the problems his dad worked for him are wrong.

Ex-president Roosevelt possessed many admirable qualities, and his friends are numbered by the millions. Of course he had his faults but where is there a man that has served the people as long as the mourned statesman that has none. A great man, and the best of all a true American, and a patriot. His memory will live long in every American heart.

Several writers in the new prohibition states are asking what they can swear off from next New Year's. They'll know a lot of things to swear off next New Year's. Everybody is telling what he doesn't know about General Pershing's politics, and the contest seems to be free for all. Well, out in these parts, they say he did receive his West Point appointment during the office tenure of a Republican congressman. So, while that was a long time ago and may not have meant anything anyhow, we might as well throw it in along with the other guesses concerning the general's political preferences now.

AN AMBASSADOR FOR PERU.

There will be universal approval of Secretary Lansing's recommendation that the American Legation at Lima be made an embassy. Our friendly relations with Peru demand that we reciprocate without delay her courtesy in designating an Ambassador for Washington. Since our representative to Chile already enjoys the rank of Ambassador a failure to show an equal regard for Peru at the moment when relations between these two nations are so dangerously strained might be interpreted at Lima as an indication of unfriendliness.

Peru has a right to our esteem and gratitude. During the world war she aligned herself definitely with the Allied Powers. She contributed not a little to the success of the common cause by giving over to this country under charter the German vessels that had taken refuge in her ports. To send her a representative of the highest rank is due her not only because of her diplomatic importance but as an evidence of our friendship.

TELL HIM NOW.

"If with pleasure you are viewing any work a man is doing, If you like him, if you love him, tell him now;

Don't withhold your approbation till the parson makes oration, And he lies with snowy lilies o'er his brow;

For no matter how you shout it, he won't really care about it; He won't know how many tears-drops you have shed;

If you think some praise is due him, now's the time to tell it to him. For he cannot read his tombstone when he's dead.

More than fame and more than money, is the comment kind and sunny, And the hearty warm approval of a friend;

For it gives to life a savor, and it makes you stronger, braver, And it gives you heart and spirit to the end.

If he earns your praise, bestow it; if you like him, let him know it; Let the words of true encouragement be said;

Do not wait till life is over, and he's underneath the clover, For he cannot read his tombstone when he's dead."

THE STORY: "In the courtyard of a monastery, years ago, a poor monk planted a rosebush. In spite of his tender care it never blossomed. The gentle priest brooded over it, considering it an evidence of divine displeasure. One day, so the legend runs, he offered up a prayer at the side of the bush that it might bloom. In the midst of his supplication a gentle voice bade him be at peace and looking up he saw the Holy Mother standing before him—and to a miracle—the rosebush had burst into bloom."

Joline, "a daughter of joy," dressed as a Bacchante, performs a dance of revelry in a cabaret in the Latin Quarter of Paris. Paul Granville, a poor American artist, draws sketches of her as she dances. Moved by his poverty, Joline offers to pose for him without pay. Duclos, her Apache lover, leaves in a jealous rage.

Inspired by his model, Paul achieves success at the salon with paintings entitled La Bacchante, Salome, Sappho, the Sphinx, and Sin, always with Joline as model. De Roche, a wealthy artist, plans to separate her from Paul and commissions him to paint "The Madonna of the Rose-Bush," for a monastery whose monks are praying for a recurrence of the miracle of the sacred rose-bush which has ceased to bloom.

Paul feels that Joline cannot typify the Virgin Mother. Joline, heart broken, rudely thrusts all applicants from the studio. Powerless to cope with her, he and Joline start for the monastery. As she is posing, Brother Augustine comes to the sacred bush to pray. He sees Joline and faints at her feet, believing that he has beheld the Virgin. Later he tells his brothers of the miracle and says, "Once more our sacred bush will bloom and God will spare me to see the day!" The bush does bloom, and Brother Augustine dies, happy in the thought that he has won divine forgiveness. The story of his vision spreads far and wide and pilgrims come to worship before the bush. Joline confesses to the Prior. He is shocked but still believes a miracle has been performed—that in some mysterious way the spirit of the Madonna must have shown in her eyes.

"For see," he says, "the bush has bloomed again!" He gives Joline one of its blossoms. A revelation has come into her soul. She prays for strength to live without Paul. Dead to his appeals to return with him to Paris, and to all promises from De Roche of love and luxury, she goes to work among the peasants. In Paris, Paul's picture, "The Madonna of the Rose-Bush" creates a furor.

With the entry of the United States into war, Paul enlists. Later, he and Duclos, Joline's former lover, lie wounded on the same battlefield. Hunting for the wounded, Joline finds them both. Duclos dies in her arms after obtaining her forgiveness, but Paul is saved. In front of the sacred rosebush where she found her soul, the Prior makes Joline and Paul man and wife.

This guaranteed-to-please-you picture will be shown at the Parmele theatre on next Tuesday and Wednesday, January 14th and 15th and if the reception it has met at places where it has already been shown is a safe criterion, it may be predicted the film will be shown to packed houses at each performance. Exceptionally fine acting is said to characterize every scene in the entire seven reels.
