PUT UP TEMPORARY BARRACKS

To Shelter Homeless People, Says C. L. Pitman, G. M. 1st Cl., in Letter to His Wife.

From Monday's Daily.

C. L. Pitman, G. M. 1st Cl., who has been in France for about a year, writes interestingly of the reconstruction work in the devastated war area, and tells of what is being done to rehabilitate the land. The areas where the battles have raged for almost four years is entirely demolished and it will be a long time before any semblance of the former peaceful homes may be had.

Lille, France, Jan. 10, 1919.

My Dear Wife and Kiddies:

Will start another letter tonight. This makes about a dozen letters I have written and haven't received one from you. We were just getting settled good, but now we have to move to another building again.

They moved the galley tonight, so we'll have to walk about half a mile for breakfast tomorrow morning.

We have only about 125 jobs here now. And soon we'll be starting out to repair the different towns of France and Belgium that were shot up, and put up barracks for the people to live in, until they can get their homes fixed up.

I think this will be an interesting trip and I'm glad I'm on it. I think, too, I'll be discharged as soon as I get back to the states. I haven't heard how long I will have to stay here, but I don't believe it will be more than three or four months.

They are sending the aviation bunch back as fast as they can, but I was among the last to come so I suppose I'll be among the last to go back.

The U. S. has an enormous lot of material and supplies here. You couldn't begin to imagine how much stuff we have. Auto trucks, for instance. They would cover Plattsmouth if they were joined together.

I would like to have some one tell me the U. S. didn't do anything in this war.

We have a lot of Frenchmen working with us. Some of them are discharged soldiers. They eat dinner and supper with us, and you should see them eat. They act as though they never had had a good, square meal before!

I don't know how much they pay them, but they don't earn any more than they eat. It takes them forever to get anything done.

I was talking to a Frenchie the other night (He talked pretty good English) and he said there weren't many Germans here at the last, and they all left in the night. No one knew they were gone. They heard a lot of explosions in the night, and when daylight came they found every bridge across the canal was blown up and not a German to be seen. The British came in two days later. Now there seem to be as many British as French.

We have muster on Sunday morning. We must be in full dress uniform with shoes shined. Its about the only regulation stuff we have.

The skipper gave us a little lecture about our duties here. He told us about meeting an American woman, one who was with the Belgian Relief. She said she had traveled all through Belgium and through France and the only Relief Commission she could see that was actually doing any work was a little bunch of "sailors" (get that?) putting up barracks for the unfortunates. She said the greater bunch of the army was doing their work in offices. Of course we naval men thought that quite a compliment to us.

I had a long chat with a Canadian sergeant last night. He told me some awful things that happened in this war. Will tell you about them when I get home.

Well, I must get ready for dinner. Hope this finds everyone well.

C. L. PITTMAN,
G. M. 1st Cl., U. S. Naval Relief Unit, Lille, France.
