PIONEER WOMAN PASSES TODAY

MRS. JACOB VALLERY JR. CALLED TO OTHER WORLD, AFTER SHORT ILLNESS.

Funeral and Burial Will Occur Tomorrow and Interment Will Be at Oak Hill.

From Wednesday's Daily. Mrs. Jacob Vallery Jr. the oldest pioneer of Plattsburgh and Cass County died at her home Tuesday, February 4th, at 11:50 P. M.

Mrs. Vallery was born in Germany and came to this country in her youth. She with her husband were one of the first five families that settled in Plattsburgh in the fall of 1854 and she has resided here continuously since that time. She was a woman of the most gentle disposition, a kind and loving mother with a personal manner of rarest quality and universally beloved by all.

Her husband Jacob Vallery Jr. who died in 1905 was prominent in the affairs of Nebraska and laid out the townsite of Plattsburgh. Mrs. Vallery is survived by eleven children who are, Mrs. F. E. White of Omaha, Mrs. Annie Polk of Boise, Idaho, Geo. W. Vallery, of Denver, Mrs. Dudley Higginson of Chicago, John F. Vallery of Denver, Chas. A. Vallery of St. Joseph, Mo., Louis H. Vallery of Los Angeles, and Mrs. Katherine Minor, Mrs. W. J. Streight, Mrs. T. P. Livingston and Miss Mathilda Vallery, all residing in Plattsburgh.

The funeral will be held from her home on Thursday afternoon at 3:00 o'clock.

GENERAL WOOD'S WORK

Gen. Leonard Wood has inaugurated a line of work at Camp Funston which will be of far-reaching value to the large force of men under his command, as well as to the country at large. In addition to their army training, the Camp Funston men have educational facilities such as would be beyond the reach of very many of them elsewhere.

By arrangement with the Kansas State Agricultural college, which is at Manhattan, Kansas, only a few miles from Camp Funston, instructors from the college give frequent lectures at the camp on all branches of agricultural work—stock raising, land fertilization and so on, including agriculture in its broadest sense. As most of the men under General Wood's command are from the farming population, this course of instruction should be invaluable to them on their return to civil life. In addition to that, the college has offered to take three hundred men in the institution's work shops and laboratories and instruct them in a course of mechanical engineering. General Wood has taken full advantage of this offer. There will be barracks near the college, and as many men as possible will be quartered there and comfortably cared for while receiving the instruction so generously offered.

At the camp itself instruction in various lines of study is going on. The mornings, weather permitting, are devoted to strictly military instruction and army work, while the men generally have the rest of the time to spend by improving themselves in general study. The illiterates, of whom there is a not very large, but by no means negligible percentage, have full opportunity for instruction in the elementary school branches which, outside of the army, many of them would feel more or less humiliated in asking for and accepting.

This is putting the army, while we are on a peace basis, to the very best use that could be made of it. It is making a sort of university, which is not only creating American soldiers—and American soldiers are second to none in the world—but which is also lifting to a higher level the standards of American citizenship. There is in all this a breadth of vision and an intelligent patriotism quite characteristic of General Wood. It is worthy of him at his best, and that is saying a great deal. Whatever this admirable soldier's personal feelings may be at the all but feminine petty spitefulness to which he has been subjected, he has utterly sunk such feelings and has given himself as whole heartedly to the duties in the field to which he has been confined as has any man in the service, either here at home or abroad. That his men at Camp Funston are devoted to him is a mere matter of course. They have been devoted to him wherever he has been in command. He measures up to the highest standard of the American army, officer and gentleman, and when you have said that you have said about all that could be said in praise of any man.—Harvey's Weekly.

LITTLE MISS CHAPMAN.

From Monday's Daily. Yesterday a little daughter arrived to brighten the future home of Mr. and Mrs. John Chapman. The little lady tipped the scales at six and one-half pounds, and was born at the home of its grandmother, Mrs. J. W. Johnson, in this city, where Mrs. Chapman has been spending the winter with her mother. Mr. Chapman is at present on their ranch home in Montana, where Mrs. Chapman and two children will return with the early spring days.

IS "FLU" HOG CHOLERA?

English Paper Suggests That Disease Is Result Of American Bacon.

From Monday's Daily. The following clipping was taken from an English paper and sent to a friend in this country and was last week published in the Brady Vindicator. We deem it worthy of reproduction as follows:

On November 9 we suggested that flu was really swine-fever; later we hinted that America might send some of her "bacon" to the German food committee had acted on our first suggestion, and given the flu its true name; while a Newcastle doctor had successfully treated 400 "flu" patients for swine fever. Now comes the absolute confirmation of our suspicions. And it is enough to make our hair stand on end. It is swine-fever—with a vengeance. That fact was first established by doctors in France, when our soldiers began to fall ill of the mysterious malady. The doctors reported; and the importation of American bacon was stopped. So far so good! Thanks to these powerful measures the ravages of the plague in the army were checked. But what was done here at home, where the market was being flooded with American bacon? Nothing—absolutely nothing! The importation was not forbidden, and the public were not told. Why not? These are questions which everybody who has been infected, and every relative of every body who has died of the plague, will demand to be answered. Why were we not told? Why was not the importation stopped? It must be mentioned here that the germ of this disease is so virulent that when a pig is infected it has to be killed and buried straight away.

with sulphates to kill the poison. It is not necessary to eat the bacon to be infected. In fact, vegetarians are easy victims. If you import the bacon the whole country is open to the ravages of the disease. And we want to know why we were delivered to this plague. Is it believable that the military authorities in France knew and the food control department here did not know. And, if the department knew, what interest other than the public interest could prevent it from immediate and drastic action? Why has such kindness been shown both to the American meat trust and to American bacon? A candid statement on these pressing points must be made at once; all the people can't be fooled—or victimized—all the time!

John Bull. Any one that has raised hogs knows that a man is immune from hog cholera, and also all farm animals. Some of the bacon rushed over here was of poor quality and I know some was not much better than salt pork. I don't think any of the American bacon is of as good quality as the Irish and Danish, which is young lean hogs or rather pigs and is very mild cured and comes to the market in whole halves only the head, feet and the leaf hard being removed. I don't think that kind of curing would keep good in the climate of the states.
