Old man weather can put on the most disconcerting frown imaginable when the mood seizes him, but he has gone clear through January without throwing a fit in this locality. Only old settlers have seen such a January as that of 1919. Fifty per cent of the feed has done the work, as compared with the quantity that would have been needed had December and January been severe, and almost the same ratio would hold in the amount of fuel consumed.

The navy is America's first line of defense. It ought by all means to be adequate. But in providing for a navy we must not full ourselves into the idea that ships make us secure without the need of mili tary preparedness. We have just had a striking illustration of this fact. The war was a defensive war for America, but it was fought three thousand miles from home. The navy was useful. But the war ed citizen. was won by the army. WILL IT BE APPROVED?

The people of Nebraska have vot- Albert Timmas, Plaintiff ed for the holding of a constitutional convention. The plain purpose is which will serve the state better than the present document, fortyfour years old.

To gain that result, two things are necessary. First, the convention must be composed of men wise and fair, who wil interpret the need and the mood of the people into a concise, plainly stated, well balanced organic law. Second, the people must approve the work of the con-

The second task may be harder than the first. The adoption of a The legislature is moving along new constitution is not an easy maiter under any circumstances. It was Omaha's experience in the kindred matter of a "home rule" charter. To succeed, the new constitution must be submitted under the most auspicious circumstances and it behooves all men interested in the success of the movement to consider how public confidence in the convention and its work may best be

> This consideration is of much importance to the legislators who are about to decide how the members of the constitutional convention shall be selected.

> Let us assume, for the moment at least, that partisan election of convention delegates attended by party lineups throughout the state based in part, at least, on principles of national government not involved in state affairs-will result in the selection of men just as wise, just as honest, just as able as would result from a non-partisan election. Let us assume that a convention under partisan influence and control, republican or democratic, will as a nonpartisan body. What about the people's approval of the proposed constitution?

"Partisanship is partisanship. It is not always wise; it is sometimes blind. Democrats will be inclined to look askance at the work of a convention avowedly republican.
