

SOME FREAKS OF TORNADO IN OMAHA

VACUUM OF THE STORM CLOUD PLAYS NUMEROUS QUEER TRICKS SUNDAY EVE

SHOWS POWER OF THE WIND

Eggs in Pantry of a House Cut in Two Remain Unbroken—A Phonograph Plays On

From Wednesday's Daily. Various tales of miraculous escapes and queer tricks played by the treacherous winds of the tornado that struck Dundee Sunday night, are now being told by people who were in the path of the cloud. Chickens picked clean of feathers, cows transported several miles in the air, houses unroofed with such ease that the occupants did not know they were exposed to the raid and people uninjured in the total wrecks of their homes are but a few of the instances of the freakish work done.

The tornado struck near 56th and Center streets at 8:48, according to the report of Fire Chief Dineen. He explained that as each wire in the path of the tornado was severed the fire gong in the station rang. At 8:48 a series of persistent intermittent rings began and continued over a period of nearly 2 minutes.

A chair was driven into the outside wall of a house at 4815 Underwood avenue. Each of the four legs penetrated the siding.

While residents in Keystone Park addition just west of Benson escaped the path of the tornado, they say they suffered the most severe hail storm ever encountered in the vicinity. Hailstones of enormous size were driven by a heavy straight wind doing considerable damage.

On the Pulte farm at the edge of town there was a garage and when the storm came up an automobile was standing inside. The tornado picked the garage from its foundation, carried it nearly 200 feet and dashed it to the ground completely wrecked, while the automobile remained where it had stood, apparently not having been moved an inch.

John Gross of Papillion also lost his cow as did Mrs. Andrew Johnson, 1018 North 42nd Avenue. Later a cow was found further along in the path of the storm but there's no telling whether it was carried all the way from Papillion or only from the 42nd Avenue district.

House Destroyed—Family Unhurt

The home of Webster Miles, south side commission man, at 5030 Jackson street, was not only leveled by the storm, but was so completely demolished that not a single portion of the structure was left intact. Despite this fact eight people who were in the house escaped injury whatsoever.

Out of this heap of debris, just after the storm had passed, emerged Mrs. Miles and her three-year-old son, Webster; Mrs. Lloyd Osborne and her two children, Lloyd, six and Melvin, two, while Mr. Miles and his infant son Merwin were in some unaccountable manner removed from the second story of the house and deposited on the lawn unharmed. Lloyd Osborne was sucked out of the front door by wind.

At the approach of the tornado, Mrs. Miles and Mrs. Osborne were in the basement and the men had just been warned. Osborne was on the stairs leading from the second story and was drawn out of the open front door by the powerful suction of the wind. A moment later he found himself seated in the front yard with the child still in his arms. A Ford sedan which was parked in front of the house stood in the same spot as it did before the storm came, but was turned upside down. When Miles noted it, all four wheels were in the air revolving at a terrific speed.

A search of the debris an hour later resulted in Mrs. Miles recovering a jewel case containing four diamond rings valued at $1,000. Three chickens picked as clean as a butcher ever picked a fowl were discovered on the stone steps leading to the house.

STORM BURNED OUT THE STREET LIGHTS

And Company is Burning Them Day-time so Workmen May Locate the Damaged Ones.

From Wednesday's Daily. Many people have been wondering why the street lights have been allowed to burn all day for the past couple of days. And it is but natural that they should for juice costs money nowadays.

For their information it is stated that the street lighting circuit was burned out in the storm last Sunday night and many of the globes were rendered useless by the high voltage passing through them. The work of replacing these damaged ones is facilitated by having the lights burn through the day so that the workmen may quickly locate the dead ones and put new bulbs in their place. The cost of the bulbs already installed by way of replacement is in excess of $300. It would seem that there would be a fund for this sort of contingency, for no one knows just when such a storm will come.
