SCHOOL YEAR DRAWING TO A CLOSE NOW

Only Two More Weeks After This Remain—Teachers and Pupils Are Not a Bit Sorry.

From Tuesday's Daily.

Present term school days are nearly over. And when the end comes, on Friday, June 5th, teachers and pupils alike will be glad.

In numerous ways the present school year has been a hard and trying one. At the beginning the bug bit in its work and then came on again for a second session. The armistice brought with it a certain spirit of restlessness and joy that detracted the minds of the youngsters from their studies. Next was the Christmas vacation and with the school year nearly half gone much more than half of the work lay in front of the pupils. But they have settled down to more studious habits since the second semester began and in a large measure made up the back studies.

The weather has remained conducive to the lateness of closing school but should a sudden hot spell confront us it will be reflected in the work of both teachers and pupils.

The closing weeks will be filled with divers and numerous social functions incident to graduation time and everybody will be kept more than busy from now until the end of the semester.

Practically all of the present force of teachers have signed up signifying their intention of returning again next year, which will mean but a very few new faces among the teachers when the call to study peals forth next September.
