From Thursday's Daily.
For some little time we have had a suspicion that Corporal Frank H. Smith, the excellent young man who was for so many years connected with this paper, and who is well known and liked by Plattsburgh people, had arrived in America, but before we were able to ascertain if our suspicions were correct or not, we were delightfully surprised this morning when he stepped off the Burlington train from Omaha. He looked brown as a berry and strong and hearty as a result of his long term of service. One thing that had not been eradicated was his kindly smile and the bright twinkle of his eye that accompanied it as he greeted us.

Corporal Smith has been in the service just two years now, it being about this time in 1917 when he severed his connection with the Journal to join forces with Uncle Sam. For some time thereafter he was located at Omaha, departing in September, 1917, for Camp Cody, where he was given intensive training and in due time was sent overseas. After the armistice was signed, Mr. Smith, like all others, was anxious to get back home, but his services were needed and he stuck uncomplainingly to the job, remaining on foreign soil until a few weeks ago.

While on his way back, Frank met Dan Cooney, the barber, with whom he came to Camp Dodge, where the two were discharged yesterday and traveled together to Omaha, from where Mr. Cooney went on west to visit his folks. In a short time he too will return to Plattsburgh and, it is understood, resume his former position in the barber shop of C. A. Rosencrans.

"Smiley" departs this afternoon for Pittsburgh, Mo., where he goes to greet the best friend a man can have—his mother, and after a visit there and a short rest he will return to Plattsburgh to again take up his work as a member of the Journal force.

VISITED IN PLATTSBURGH

From Thursday's Daily.
E. W. Pease and family started from North Platte a short time ago for a visit at their old home near Chicago, and when they arrived at Hastings, a broken car caused considerable delay. So Mrs. Pease and the children took the train, leaving Mr. Pease and son, Elmer, to come on with the car when it was repaired. After a short visit here, word came yesterday from the husband and son that they had gotten as far as Union, where they suffered second mishap to the car. Leaving the car there, they came on to this city and this morning took the Burlington for Chicago. While in the city they called upon Everett E. Ward, who taught in the North Platte schools before going into the service. The young man, Elmer Pease, was a student under Mr. Ward at North Platte.

BREAKS ARM THIS MORNING

From Thursday's Daily.
While cranking his Ford car in the usual manner this morning, Dr. Oscar Sandin had his right arm broken when the critter back-fired despite the fact that he had the spark retarded as far as is his custom. This is the second time the car has performed thuswise, and it looks as though it is a hoodoo. The accident will lay the good natured doctor up for some time and cause him no little inconvenience in his work.
