He says that he heard several cars coming behind him, but he was in a hurry to get home and could not wait on them. This is what we would call a pretty good walk for a man in his 80th year.

Wade Porter and Family. At the Old Home.

Mr. and Mrs. Wade Porter and family, who have been residing up near Creighton, Nebraska, for a number of years, came down last Friday for a visit with friends and relatives at the old Cass county home. Mr. Porter was a pleasant caller at the Journal office, and in conversation with him he tells us that he has completely sold out his holdings in northern Nebraska, and is now looking for a new location, and he might locate in Cass county. If he could find a piece of land that looked good to him, he bought and owned a 200 acre farm in that county and held it just 2 months and 2 days, and sold it at an advance of $25.00 per acre. This is what we would term making money pretty fast as well as mighty easy. Wade has done well in the northern part of the state, and there is not one of his many friends around the old town that is more pleased over this fact than the Journal editor.

Mr. and Mrs. L. H. Puls and children returned home from their two weeks visit in the east last Saturday evening. They spent some time in the Hudson factory, one of the greatest in the country, a factory large enough to turn out from 225 to 250 of these large cars per day. It is sure some great big manufacturing plant, and this is what the Hudson people are doing today. On the return trip they drove down to Pekin, Illinois, where Mrs. Puls has a number of relatives, and where they spent a few days. From here they came west and crossed the Mississippi river at Burlington, Ia., and on to Ottumwa, Iowa, where they also spent a day or two with relatives of Mrs. Puls. From Ottumwa they went north to Des Moines, where they came west to Omaha. The trip was a very pleasant one in every particular making a little over 1,000 miles on the return trip, with the finest of highways and weather, until they struck Omaha, and in grand old Nebraska, from their home state, they found the toughest roads of the entire journey, from Omaha to Plattsmouth.
