Some athletic program for the Home Coming!

Really, the big war was not fought over Shantung.

Some statesmen get their faces on our money, but most of us are satisfied to get our hands on it.

Fat people are willing to do anything to reduce their weight except to eat less and take exercise.

All of the folks will be here on Home Coming day to see the returned service men in the big parade.

If Satan is the father of lies, what an awful lot of children he has among the politicians, and others.

The Salvation army drive is now on in Nebraska. Give what you can to this splendid organization. It is well deserved.

Generally speaking, time flies, but not when a fellow is waiting for a small waiter in a restaurant to serve a dinner.

Now, what is it, anyhow, that a fool rooster finds to crow about at midnight on a dagain at three or four o'clock in the morning?

The poet who wrote that "man wants but little here below" has another guess coming. There is little here below he don't want.

The war on the H. C. L. wages merrily, but little result is being found by the humble citizen who is coughing up the iron men for the high priced foodstuffs.

Congress is to investigate the steel strike. It is to be hoped that the investigation does not suffer the usual fate of the congressional inquiries which have been held—amounting to nothing.

The "flu" is appearing in different sections of the country and Omaha has had its first case. Safety First is the best policy. If you have a cold see a physician, keep quiet and don't spit on the streets and in public places.

It is very easy to get up on one's hind legs and howl about everything and everybody in sight, including your public officials, newspaper editors and "Big Business," but the chances are always two to one that the howler would not do any better or as well, if it were all left up to his Websterian mind and Gladstonian ability.

The visit of the American anti-saloon leaguers to Europe and their dip into the personal affairs of the inhabitants of the old world, has not been kindly received and the U. S. department of state is endeavoring to check their activities. England and France are both confident they can settle this question to their own satisfaction without the aid or advice of the imported workers.

Exploding boilers do not make an agitating noise

When at football you have heard a group of college boys.

Bixby, in the State Journal—We have many things to be thankful for, but Hiram Johnson is not included in the list.

Governor McKelvie now has a censorship on news from the state house. Truly a great demonstration of the freedom of our institutions.

It was very sad to realize that many brides have yet to learn that it is not so very far from the cut glass counter to the ten cent store.

Every service man and Red Cross nurse in Cass county is invited to attend the big home coming here October 4th. Come early and stay late.

Seeing that wine cannot be sold any longer in this country, why not use it to christen ships and airplanes with, instead of wasting perfectly good milk?

No, the nose is not a double-barreled doorway to the brain. It is the auto horn of humanity and detective of things which by any other name would smell as sweet. Incidentally it is used to stick into other people's business.

The California grape growers who were trembling for the effects of prohibition upon their vineyards have disposed of their crop this year to a number of large cities. The draught has developed some expert grape juice makers who can get the kick in the product.

Senator Hiram Johnson has returned to Washington from his anti-treaty speechmaking trip. His magnetic personality and oratorical ability stirred up considerable enthusiasm, of course. But in the main his speeches served to cloud the issue.

In Washington Senator Johnson is expected to lead the fight on the "six vote" question. Senator Reed has not hesitated to come out and publicly misstate the facts in regard to the six votes. Senator Johnson has been more careful in his choice of words, but no less misleading in the impression he gave.

We are encouraged by both to believe that "England has six votes to America's one." Therefore it is a pro-British league.

Let's see about that. What are the facts as they appear in the covenant? Don't take the word of either Hiram Johnson or of Woodrow Wilson. Go to the covenant and find out for yourself.

In the league there are to be two sorts of votes: First, there are to be the votes of the five "Principal Allied and Associated Powers," and second, the votes of the other members of the league.

Each of the "Big Five" powers has a perpetual seat and vote in the league council. In all except a few unimportant matters the decisions must be unanimous. Each of these votes may be described as a "big" vote.

Other members of the league are permitted to elect four members to the council. In addition to the "Big Five" powers, five British dominions and twenty-two other states are named as signatory members. Thirteen nations not in the war are invited to join. This makes a possible forty members to be represented by four votes on the council.

These nations have what may be described as "little votes." A majority of these would be able to elect a representative on the council and so prevent unanimous decision.

But one "big" vote would be equal in veto power to twenty of these little votes—or to all of them, for that matter.

What representation has England? None whatever. England is not mentioned as having a vote, "big" or "little." Nor does the United Kingdom as such. The British empire has one "big" vote. Each of the five dominions has one "little" vote.

There is no real basis of comparison between the two, because the "big" vote is so very much more effective.

Senators Johnson and Borah talk about the "six votes," but they do not tell the audiences what kind of votes the yare talking about. The effect is to obscure the issue and to deceive those who are entitled to the fair truth.—Omaha News.

TIMES HAVE CHANGED.

In Philadelphia they operated on a boy's head the other day to make a better boy of him. That is not just where our mother used to operate on us with that good old carpet slipper when it was necessary to make us a better boy, but, of course, times have changed.

ADDING INSULT TO INJURY.

We saw a fellow in an automobile the other day that played a tune. This is adding insult to injury. It is bad enough to be chased all over the streets by the snorting thing without being forced to listen to their alleged music besides. Next thing we know, some tarantula idiot will be inventing a motorcycle that will preach a sermon.

DISTINCTIONS.

The man who gambles for a living is a disreputable person; but the one who plays football with other peoples' property on the stock exchange is highly respected by society.

The grocer who salts his sugar is a cheat; but the corporation owner who waters stock is a financier.

The man who kills another is a murderer; but the general who kills thousands is a hero.

ARISTOCRATIC TASTES.

A cabaret show was recently given among the ultra rich at Palm Beach, Florida, in which all the nasty dances were shown by half naked dancing girls and the menu consisted of sausages, pancakes, onions and beer. A stomach that can assimilate sausages, pancakes, onions, beer and hoochie-coochie all at one time could digest scrap iron. It takes the very rich and aristocratic to reach into the realms of high art and soulfulness. Wah!

THE SOIL AND MANKIND.

Creeds and carrots, catechisms and cabbages, tenets and turnips, religions and rutabagas, all are products of the soil, and government also, as well as grass, for as is the soil and climate so is man. New England's soil is barren and flinty, and, therefore, its men are stern, its women thin-lipped and flat-chested, and its creeds hard and uncompromising. Our Southern and Pacific states are sunny, soft and expansive, so their people are sunny in disposition, lovable and broad of mind; their fruits sweet and juicy and their creeds a catholicism.

The Best Advertisement.

The best advertisement merchant can have is a satisfied customer. No greater recommendation can be given an article than the following by E. B. Milburn, Prop. Guion Drug Store, Guion, Ark. "We have sold Chamberlain's Cough Remedy for years and have always found that it gives perfect satisfaction."

Just What She Needed.

"I used a bottle of Chamberlain's Tablets some time ago and they proved to be just what I needed," writes Mrs. Volta Bankson, Chillicothe, Mo. "They not only relieved me of indigestion but toned up my liver and rid me of backache and dizziness that I had been subject to for some time. They did me a world of good and I will always speak a good word for them."
