From Wednesday's Daily.
Last evening the young ladies of the Klu Klux Klan were very pleasantly entertained at the home of Mrs. Louis Egenberger, who was assisted in entertaining by Miss Florence Potter.

The rooms of the home were very prettily arranged with the attractive Halloween decorations of orange and black in streamers draped through the chandeliers to the side walls and interspersed with black cats, goblins and witches, significant of the Halloween season just past.

The evening was spent in the delights of high five, and the most intense interest was manifested by the members of the party in the fascinating game, at which Miss Bernese Newell proved the most efficient and was awarded the king prize.

At a suitable hour a very enjoyable two-course luncheon was served by the hostesses, which proved one of the delights of the evening. CONSILIATION OF BOTH FACTIONS IS NEAR

PROVIDING SOLUTION NOT ARRIVED SOON, NEW INDUSTRIAL PARLEY TO TAKE PROBLEM.

REPORT OF BREAK IS DENIED

Quiet As a Cemetery On a Rainy Day at the Miners Headquarters.

Washington, Nov. 4.—Organized labor throughout the country is preparing to extend financial assistance to 425,000 coal miners, whose strike benefit fund is tied up by the temporary restraining order of Judge Anderson of Indianapolis, according to information received by labor men here.

Reports of plans to help the miners began to arrive coincidentally with reports indicating that schools and factories are beginning to feel the pinch and are closing down for lack of fuel.

"Every union man in the country will do his share to prevent the miners being starved into surrender," said L. E. Sheppard, president of the Order of Railway Conductors.

Adopts Waiting Policy.
The government today had apparently adopted a waiting policy regarding the strike, in the belief that both sides soon would show a spirit of conciliation.

Unofficial reports received at the White house led government officials to believe the miners were looking more favorably upon President Wilson's arbitration offer, reiterated by Secretary Tumulty today.

Providing a meeting of miners and operators is not arranged in the meantime, it was assumed the new industrial conference called by the president would discuss the coal strike as well as the steel situation.

Deny Report of Break.
Union officials vigorously denied operators' claims that in addition to every nonunion mine being worked to capacity, operations had been resumed in fifteen West Virginia mines, closed in the initial stages of the strike.

The government continued to commandeer coal consigned to private dealers and divert it to essential industries and institutions.

Indianapolis, Nov. 4.—The strike of the coal miners will be ended with a favorable decision for the union men, before litigation now pending in United States district court here can be completed, according to attorneys for the miners' union.

They gathered here Monday to prepare to file answer to the government's petition for a temporary injunction and a court order instructing union heads to withdraw their strike instructions.

However, attorneys went ahead with their plans to fight the case in court.

Want Injunction Dissolved.
They include: 1—Asking the federal court to dissolve the restraining order which now prevents union leaders from directing the strike.

A PRETTY WEDDING LAST WEDNESDAY

The Culmination of a Romance, Which Has Been the Fruit of Correspondence.

Some time since, as the Journal hinted in its last week's issue, there had been a friendly intimacy sprang up between Miss Emma Jane Wiseman, who has for a long series of years been a faithful cake taker of Grandpa Davis, and J. H. Daugherty of Beaver Crossing, which was the result of an introduction and correspondence through the mails. The friendship ripened into love and Mr.

Fighting the government's petitions for an injunction and a court order demanding union leaders withdraw the strike call.

3—Asking modification of the injunction in order to allow miners' unions to pay strike benefits.

Not Accomplished Purpose.
Miners feel the federal government has not accomplished its purpose of preventing the strike by procuring the injunction.

Instead, they will contend the miners have been deprived of restraining forces of wise leadership. They will point out that in previous strikes the unions have always taken steps to prevent destruction of mine property by demanding that men necessary to protection of the mines remain at work. They have held the radicals among the union membership in check, it will be contended.

By federal court injunction they believe this influence has been removed, creating a dangerous situation.

On the second point, the miners' representatives will hold that an injunction can prevent future action only and under an injunction proceedings, the court cannot order that past action be rescinded.

Asked to Modify Order.
The court will be asked to modify the court order, allowing payment of strike benefits, only in case the other two miners' contention is overruled. Miners realize their men are not in a financial position to carry on a long strike without outside aid.

The union will take the position that money in the union treasury has been deposited there by the individual miners, the same as they would place it in a savings bank. They will hold that these funds are not union property, but the property of the individual members of the union, who have placed it in the treasury temporarily for safe keeping.

None of these steps will be taken before next Saturday, the date set by the court for the hearing on the temporary injunction.

Their optimistic view was expressed after an all day conference, during which they outlined their plan of action and reviewed reports received from the coal districts.

Reports Not Made Public.
These reports, while not made public, are known to include figures showing the strike remained practically as on Saturday.

This, in the belief of union leaders, will cut down the production of coal to such an extent the government and coal mine operators will be forced to meet the men's demands in order to prevent a national catastrophe.

The opinion of union leaders is that coal production has been reduced 90 per cent.

Acting President John L. Lewis conferred with the attorneys Monday night.

Lewis was evidently well pleased with the situation, but remained silent, as he believes the restraining order issued by the federal court demands.

It was as quiet as a cemetery on a rainy day at the miners' headquarters. Messenger boys opened the door at five minute intervals with telegrams, stacking them high on Lewis' desk. This was the only unusual activity around the office.

At the department of justice headquarters, preparations were being made by Dan W. Simms, special assistant United States district attorney in charge of the miners' litigation, to enforce court orders to the limit of the law.

Simms was in touch with the bureau of investigation, whose agents are scattered throughout the coal districts watching for possible violation of the restraining order.

It was learned Monday that, before the restraining order was issued, the miners had planned to present their case to the public in page advertisements in 100 leading newspapers throughout the country.

Believe Sentiment Against Them.
They believed sentiment was against them and they planned to tell of the working conditions and the need of readjustment in the mining industry.

Joseph H. Daugherty started from his home in the west for Union, to see and claim his to be wife, when he had the misfortune to break his car, and was compelled to return home. After having adjusted his business he hastened on here, arriving last Sunday evening on the late Missouri Pacific train which arrived away after midnight. He met his fair sweet heart on the following morning, Monday, when their expectations were both realized and they were well satisfied with each other they had learned to love, by the charming letters they had written. It was but the work of a short time to arrange for the wedding and their return to his home near Beaver Crossing. During the afternoon, with friends they departed for Plattsmouth, where obtaining the necessary license, they were united in the holy bonds of matrimony, by his honor Judge A. J. Beeson, witnessed by Mrs. Mable Reynolds and Ralph Davis of Union. The couple were given a wedding dinner by Mrs. Mary Davis, of Union, at which there were present Grandpa Davis, Mrs. Clara Davis, W. C. Carraher, the contracting parties, Miss Emma Jane Wiseman and Joseph H. Daugherty. After the ceremony and congratulations at Plattsmouth the happy couple departed for Omaha, and from there to their home at Beaver Crossing. The Journal joins with their many friends in extending felicitations and hopes that their lives may be happy, prosperous and that they may leave their impress for good on all who may know them.
