The bureau of labor statistics in Washington has figured that th minimum annual expense of a family of five-father, mother, boy, girl and baby-is $2,262. Details are given as to how much of this sum is to be paid for rent, fuel and lights; for food, clothes and amusements. Then, for miscellaneous expenses, is allowed the lump sum of

Aye, there's the rub; Miscellaneous expenses cover a multitude of needs, all to be paid for out of $10.51 a week. This seems like lot of money, but consider, for moment, how many fingers there are to dip into this purse. There's the father's daily car fare to and from work; in most cases his lunch; with a wife and three children. father would have to have some life insurance, by all means; once in a while there is a doctor to pay, occasionally the dentist, and not in frequently the oculist.

Father has to have clean collars, so there's the laundryman; shoes have to be repaired, as a matter of economy; we must not overlook those frequent trips to the corner drug store for tooth paste, shoe polish, soap and simple household remedies-all of them necessities; the barber gets two customers in this family, anyway, and mother once in a while, should go to the hair dresser; broken dishes have to be replaced, now and then, and finally there are those odds and ends like needles, thread, shoes, laces yarn, ice cream cones, Sunday schools-but why continue?

In many families it is not rent and the fuel and the food which cause the most worry, it's the miscellaneous items .- St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

THROUGH THE BALLOT BOX

Stafford, Kas., now joins with certain misguided Nebraska communiof coal will have to stand guard ties in adopting violence as a method of manifesting opposition to the Nonpartisan league. A crowd invaded the hall wherein the league meeting was to be held, bundled the man whom it thought to be the league organizer into a sack and hauled him out into the country. As wrong man. The organizer, in due time, took the platform and held The Weeping Water Republican his meeting. But the mob's failure to achieve its purpose does not relieve it of responsibility for improper intent and act.

> To Stafford and to those Nebraska communities which have erred in similar fashion the World-Herald commends the results of Tuesday's election in Nebraska as giving promise of the right of way of dealing with the Nonpartisan league.

Nebraska has been for three years a field of Nonpartisan league activity. Organizers imported from North Dakota and others home-made in Nebraska have canvassed the state, soliciting league memberships and undertaking to solidify the new members into a working unit. They have had the very considerable advantage which is given by general in 1917 filed his declaration of citisocial unrest to any movement which | zenship. professes to offer a panacea for so cial and economic ills; the ground was fertile for such agitation and they had but to cultivate it. They have further been blessed by the character of some of the opposition; cause such as theirs thrives on nob interference and charges of bad faith so extravagant as to be ridicu-

But, with all this in their favor what has the Nonpartisan league achieved in Nebraska? It made the state constitutional convention election a test of strength. With considerable adroitness it enlisted the support of men not league members ran its own candidates; where it was not strong it supported a sympathizer. It had the support quite largely of political malcontents, who were for it not because they liked its program but because they didn't like any other program. And in this contest the Nonpartisan league in Nebraska was gloriously licked! True, the Nonpartisan league elected six or eight delegates, including the redoubtable W. J. Taylor of Custer county. But what of that? The chances are that the league has a sufficient strength to warrant a representation of eight out of 100. The chances are that its sympathizers are sufficiently numerous to warrant a representation of dozen or fifteen more of the radi-

The league has its right to representation just as much as any other group of Nebraskans. It has secured its due share. That share is a pitiful minority of the total convention. The great part of the convention, truly representative of the great majority of the state's population, is composed apparently of sanely progressive men, men who will draft a constitution that will not be a mess of foibles and hobbies, but one which, on the other hand, will not be unduly restrictive of the popular will.

Mob violence could never have changed this result, unless to have increased the Nonpartisan league strength. Men cowered by mob strength are not likely to vote contrary to their convictions when the ballot is guarded by secrecy. But men who like fair play are likely to be forced into sympathy with a cause which is not given fair treat-

The way to meet and defeat foolish political programs in free America is through the ballot box. It has worked in the past. It is working today-in the case of the Nonpartisan league in Nebraska, in the case of radicalism in Massachusetts. It will continue to work in the future. With level heads and a truly representative government, the people of America need never fear but that truth will ultimately prevail.-World-Herald
