PAROCHIALS TO BE ISSUE OF CONVENTION

PRIME TOPIC OF DISCUSSION AMONG DELEGATES NOW IN LINCOLN.

UP BEFORE LAST LEGISLATURE

Wilbur F. Byrant Has Resolution That Would Bar Them From Further Existence.

From Tuesday's Daily.

Twenty or thirty delegates to the constitutional convention. which meets in Lincoln Tuesday, are in that city and more are coming. By tonight it is that all of them will be present. It is apparent from the off hand discussions in the hotel lobbies that the parochial school will be a big issue in the convention.

Shortly after the election it was tated on good authority that 35 of the delegates were elected on the issue that the bill of rights should be amended that no such laws-the Siman language law, now in the courts-could be passed or enforced in the the state. The law was attacked by a number of parochial schools where foreign languages are taught on the ground that they interfered with the primary purpose of the church school, the teaching of the children of foreign-language speaking parents in the tongues of the latter on religious subjects, thus linking them together.

At least one resolution has made ts appearance, brought here by a delegate who proposes to ask the the parochial school system to be entirely divorced from state supervision or control, and which will, in effect, make it a law unto itself.

reached, the opinion was expressed that the new constitution should give it that power. If the court says as some believe it will, that this law does not attempt to prevent religious in foreign languages by parents or priests or ministers, there will be no need of any amendment.

The school men of the state are ceking recruits for their plan of ; perintendents for as long a term as services are satisfactory. The commissioners serve seven years, and are named by the governor.

Among the arrivals Sunday were ormer Speaker Jackson and A. J Weaver, who are candidates for president. The general talk is that no preliminary caucus is necessary, and that all contests for places can be staged on the floor of the convention.

Gus Olson of This City Develops a Good, Live Proposition in the Sharpening of Blades.

From Thursday's Daily. Gus Olson, of the Olson Photo company has in the past few weeks been devoting himself to the development of the razor blade sharpening industry and as a result of his efforts has again placed this feature of his business on a very paying basis.

Mr. Olson has a branch in Omaha that cares for the orders received and yesterday as he made his usual seems to meet with considerable trip to the metropolis he brought back with him 10,000 razor blades that had been turned in by parties who desired to have them sharpened and placed in condition for use.

> Mr. Olson is having a new machine ordered for the plant in this city that will assist in caring for the increasing demand for resharpened blades and as the orders continue to pile in will take other methods of meeting the demands of the trade. There are millions of these blades used in the country and at very little expense the razor owners can have hem made as good as new and much cheaper than the cost of new blades. The Olson company handles all manner of razors and blades and the result of their work has given the
