WHY
Some Women
dress better

SOME women have learned that there are two ways to care for clothes. They are learning to take care of them.

It is quite a mannerly thing to take care of your clothes investment and protect it up to the limit. Having your clothes carefully dry cleaned will improve their wear and help to prolong the life of their stylish lines.

"The fortunate thing about these imitation beer drinks is that they don't make you feel like bursting into song."

The only Fourth of July orator that gets a hearing these days is the baseball umpire, says the Carthage Democrat.

You may fox-trot, cake walk or you may do the shimmy, but if you jay walk it will cost you money in the police court.

Bill Bryan is so crazy about prohibition that he probably insists on smelling the breath of all the delegates each morning.

Let's hurry up and pay our debts while the dollar looks like 35 cents, because the creditor is still obliged to pretend that it is 100.

The big amplifiers placed over the speakers' platform have worked quite well in both conventions. The problem now will be to confine them to national convention.

It doesn't necessarily follow that if a man has money he also has friends, but if he has a supply of whisky he can find friends who will cheerfully go to hell for him.

Somebody has been teaching Emma McChesney a few things about politics. One of them is that a woman can't be a delegate to two opposing party conventions the same year.

There was a trace of wisdom in P. T. Barnum's vital statistics observation concerning suckers, but in his ignorance he merely scratched the surface. He never stayed in one place longer than a day or two. The crude profiteer of today stays and digs in the fishes the hole completely out.

THE PLATFORM

The democratic platform might fittingly be read, at Fourth of July celebrations, in connection with the Declaration of Independence. It is animated by the same lofty idealism, the same spirit of triumphant Americanism. It heralds the coming of a new Fourth of July that all the world will some day celebrate.

Circulated in connection with the impressive keynote speech of Chairman Cummings, it is a sufficient campaign text book for the democratic ticket. Speech and platform tell convincingly the story of democratic service for the republic and for civilization since 1912. They convey in plain terms the democratic promise of performance for the future, backed by that record. And they reveal the spirit in which the democratic party goes forth to battle.

The platform was not made for a section, or for a class, or for a race, but for the republic.

It is in no respect a radical pronouncement. But it is in every respect a progressive one. It speaks for a party of voters who, while they are not neglected or destructive of the material interests of the country, nevertheless put principle ahead of materialism, and are inspired by an idealistic and humanitarian purpose. But though their heads may pierce the skies, their feet are planted firmly on the ground. They did not emit a platform of fads or follies or isms. There is nothing "half-baked" about it. Its progressivism is American, not Russian or Marxian. It is a platform of men who have learned in nearly eight years of tremendous experience what responsibility is. It is a platform of men who realize that this is a government of and for all of the people, and that the constitution, with its rules for a democratic republic, is at once its shield and its anchor.

It is a platform that should and will appeal strongly to the womanhood of the republic, to the farmers, to labor, to honest and legitimate business, to the profound sentiment for peace, to men and women of good will everywhere.

Throughout its warp and woof it is distinguished from the republican platform which is the utterance of a timid and sordid materialism.

But most of all it is distinguished because it holds on high the banner of America's splendid ideals that converted the world war from a shambles to a consecration.

There is none of the spirit of surrender here, of apology, of hesitancy, of recreancy. There is no forgetting of those who sleep among the poppies of Flanders Field, nor of what it was they strove bravely for, and suffered and died. There is no callous indifference to the sobs of the mothers who sent their sons to die under alien skies, nor to the prayers of earth to spare their sons a like fate.

The voice of the democratic platform is for peace and humanity and progress—for justice and liberty for all men in all lands everywhere, the same as it was when the cannon were throbbing the death lists carried woe unspeakable to millions of homes throughout a devastated earth.

The democratic party stands in peace where it stood in war—for the brave and devoted invoking of the true principles of democracy for the safety and honor of the republic and the salvation of the world. For such a platform men and women can fight with a smile on their lips and a glow in their hearts.—World-Herald.

WHY THEY'RE FOR WILSON

If anyone supposed that a serious divergence of opinion existed among democrats in appraisal of the major acts of the Wilson administration he has a sufficient answer in the demonstrations of enthusiasm which have occurred on the first two days of the San Francisco convention. None but a president tremendously popular with the rank and file of his party could receive such evidences of loyalty. So far the president's "control" of the convention amounts merely to this; that the delegates there assembled from every part of the union recognize that in Mr. Wilson the party has given to the nation a man whose statesmanlike qualities have made him a world figure.

This is the distinguishing feature of the opening days of the convention. The president will be given the kind of platform he wants. He could have the nominee he wanted if he cared to make his wishes known in this respect.

It is significant that the president who has heaped on his head more partisan abuse than given any other president since Lincoln, thus holds the affections and the confidence of the mass of his party at the very moment when the slanders of his opponents are most virulent and active. Democrats have had differences with the president and will continue to have them, but when a group of them gets together, each representing a section of his country and of his party, they find themselves in complete harmony touching the major acts of the administration.

Finding fault is the easiest of political activities. It is an evidence of democracy that citizens do their own thinking, even when it runs counter to accepted doctrine. The president has been in the midst of world events, a leader in international councils. For months his health was seriously affected. Necessarily he was for long out of personal touch with men and events in his own party. He has been the handy target for the opposition party hungry for the spoils of office. For more than a year the president has been the victim of a well-financed, well-managed, unscrupulous campaign of belittlement, detraction and slander—all for the purpose of putting a republican president in the White house next March.

The country knows the character of the fight that has been waged to discredit the president. It knows that the achievements of the present administration have reflected undying credit upon America and upon the chief executive responsible for them. It knows that, as compared with these accomplishments, the failures of the Wilson regime, have been negligible and will soon be forgotten.

Realization of these facts makes Wilson shouters of the delegates at San Francisco. This convention is dealing with world issues. It is covering a review in the events of a regime destined to live in American history.—Cleveland Plain Dealer.

ORDER TO SHOW CAUSE

In the District Court of Cass county, Nebraska.

In the matter of the estate of Mae E. Goodman, deceased.

This cause came on for hearing upon the petition of Benjamin F. Goodman, administrator of the estate of Mae E. Goodman, deceased, praying for license to sell an undivided one-half interest in Lots nine (9), ten (10), eleven (11) and twelve (12), in Block one hundred ten (110) in the City of Plattsmouth, Cass county, Nebraska, or sufficient amount of the same to bring the sum of $282.26 for the payment of debts allowed against said estate, and allowances and costs of administration, for the reason that there is not sufficient amount of personal property in the possession of Benjamin F. Goodman, administrator, belonging to said estate to pay said debts, allowances and costs.

It is therefore ordered that all persons interested in said estate appear before me at chambers in the city of Plattsmouth, in said county, on the 2nd day of August, A. D. 1920, at the hour of ten o'clock a. m., to show cause if any there be, why a license should not be granted to Benjamin F. Goodman, administrator, to sell so much of the above described real estate of said deceased as shall be necessary to pay said debts and expenses.

It is further ordered that a copy of this order be served upon all persons interested in said estate by causing the same to be published once each week for four successive weeks in the Plattsmouth Journal, a newspaper printed and published in said county of Cass, and State of Nebraska.

Dated this 19th day of June, 1920. JAMES T. BEGLEY, Judge of the District Court.

CHAS. E. MARTIN, Attorney for Plaintiff.

PRODUCTS of CRAFTSMANSHIP!

People speak easily of craftsmen and craftsmanship; but every good mechanic is not a craftsman.

Craftsmanship is the individual creation of useful things in a beautiful way.

To attain craftsmanship one must know the relation of parts to the whole; must have a complete conception; must be able to image forth an idea, and must be so skilled as to reach close to perfection.

Dusterhoff Interior Decorating and Practical Painting is the product of craftsmanship; USEFUL, individual—created in a beautiful way—costly but not expensive.
