TO ASK-EXPRESSION
FROM THE VOTERS

On Repairing of the Court House the Board of County Commissioners Will Submit Same to Voters

The board of county commissioners at their session this week decided to submit to the voters of the county the proposition of whether or not the court house should be placed in shape where it will be able to withstand the effects of the weather and that the amount that will be needed for this purpose can be secured.

The matter of repairing the court house has been thoroughly discussed with expert architects and the amount necessary to place it in first class shape has been estimated at $10,000 and for which amount the voters will be asked to give their approval.

The general expression of the level headed residents from all sections of the county has been that the building should be repaired while the cost would not be as excessive as if it is allowed to continually run down as it has in the years gone by.

The building is one that is a credit to any county in the state and while its original cost was $80,000, at the present time it would require at least $250,000 to reproduce the building in anything like the present structure. It is a strictly business proposition in repairing the building as it means the ultimate saving to the people of at least a quarter of a million dollars that must come if the present building is allowed to go to rack and ruin.

The matter will be submitted at the constitutional amendment election on September 21st and as a measure of economy on the part of the taxpayers should receive their earnest and thoughtful action in its favor as it means the preservation of the structure which has been built by the county to house its county government.

COX A BIG CANDIDATE,
HITCHCOCK LIKES CHOICE

Washington, D. C., July 6.—Senator Hitchcock gave out the following statement today.

"The nomination of Governor Cox been made. It insures a vigorous campaign and it promises a probable victory. Of all the candidates before the convention he was strongest in the doubtful states. While loyal in his support of President Wilson's administration, he inherits none of the enmities and antagonisms which inevitably attach to candidates in any way connected with the administration.

"I served with Governor Cox in the house of representatives for several terms, have known him for nearly twenty years, and believe him to be a man of high integrity, tremendous energy and unusual ability. He possesses the faculty of making friends and holding them. His remarkable success during the three campaigns in Ohio gives some indication of what he is likely to do as candidate for president. He is a progressive, forward looking democrat, liberal and broad minded. He has demonstrated to the people of Ohio that he is a fine executive."

ALFALFA WEB WORM
IN THIS STATE NOW

Pests Trying Hard to Hold Down the Crop Yields While Science Does Its Part in Reserve

The webworm, which has been causing damage to Colorado crops, has been reported to be injuring the Nebraska corn crop in four counties, according to Prof. M. H. Swenk, state entomologist. Its appearance was first reported in Sarpy county June 28. Immediately thereafter reports of its damage came from Butler, Seward and Lancaster counties.

The worst damage so far reported is near Ulysses in Butler county. One farmer found an entire field heavily infested with the worms. The injury seemed so bad to him that he decided to plow up the corn. Professor Swenk advised against this on the ground that the damage might not be as great as it seems. Some damage has been reported in Lancaster county, about ten miles northwest of Lincoln.

Professor Swenk does not look for extensive injury to the Nebraska corn crop. It is too far along. The attack of the webworm is a warning, however, he believes, of what may happen later in the season. This is the first time that the first brood of webworm has caused any damage in Nebraska. It is the third brood that usually works the largest injury in this state. This brood comes in September and attacks the alfalfa.

Webworms eat the corn leaves and then spin a web over the injured parts.

Reports of serious damage to cabbage by a pest known as the Harlequin cabbage bug also have been received by the state entomologist. This is a new pest in Nebraska, and from the progress which it has made this year it may do extensive injury to cabbage and other vegetables in years to come.

Between June 18 and June 30 the state entomologist received reports of inquiry by this bug in Dundy, Hooker, Frontier, Custer and Valley counties. One man reported fears of losing his entire crop of 11,000 plants. The bug infested several areas in eastern Colorado last year and at that time crossed the line to the town of Sanborn, Dundy county, where it destroyed fifteen acres of cabbage for one grower. No other reports of its presence in this state last year were received. This year, however, it has invaded the state proper, moving rapidly in a north-easterly direction and it is now present in at least five counties. The bug works rapidly, sucking the sap out of the plants. Once it has entered a cabbage patch little can be done to save the plants. A 10 per cent kerosene emulsion will destroy the very young bugs but nothing has yet been found that will kill the adult bugs.

The United States department of agriculture, which has been studying the pest in the southern states, where it has done extensive damage for years advocates cultural methods of fighting the pest. Cabbage stalks and other remnants of the crop, together with all weeds and rubbish in the vicinity of the infested patch, should be burned in order to prevent the bugs going through the winter. Trap crops, such as mustard, rape and other early vegetation, have been used with some success.

The Harlequin cabbage has been until recent years a southern pest only. It spread, however, eastward along the Atlantic coast, doing great injury to cabbage and other garden crops, and extended its operations north and west, entering Kansas and Colorado a few years ago. From Colorado it crossed the line into this state.
