SHERWIN-WILLIAMS HOUSE PAINT SWP

How SWP cuts painting cost
The only way to buy paint economically is to forget gallon cans and figure costs by area covered and years of life. SWP covers one-third more area than paints which are cheaper per gallon. It lasts twice as long without repainting, so requires half the material and costs half the labor price (for painting and repainting).

So price per gallon means nothing. Area covered, weather resistance, and years of life are the real things that determine price economy. On that basis SWP is the cheapest possible thing you can buy.

SWP has been the leading prepared house paint for half a century. You will find a complete list of its uses.

We are taking this separated space to congratulate the old settlers association on the fortunate securing by the committee of the 20th Infantry band for the occasion and to say that there never was an aggregation who furnished music which pleased the occasion for which it had been selected more than this band. They, on their arrival gave a short concert on the street before going to the picnic grounds and then during the picnic, furnished the music which enlivened and added to the pleasure of the occasion. Winfield Got Their Number

Last Sunday an auto load of people from the south, passed along by Winfield Swan's home northeast of Union and halting their car, pulled out with a gun and killed one of its chickens which was in a field nearby. There were two men and three women in the party. After the shooting of the chicken one of the women jumped out of the car crawled under the wire fence and secured the carcass of the fowl and hastened back to the car and then made haste for the south. But they were not quick enough for Mr. Swan, for he had his car out and caught the party, securing their car number which was a Nebraska license. This was given to W. R. Banning who is this week in Lincoln and he will secure the name of the owner of the car. Not for the price of the chicken, but it looks like it is getting stronger than horse raddish when chickens are shot down in broad day light along the public highway.

Visited His Old Home.

Towne, living east of Union on the O street road, just on the river, who has been visiting in the east for some time at his old home near Fayette, Ohio, returned last Monday afternoon and tells of good crops in the east. Smoking of Ohio, he says that that country has been blessed with an abundance of rain and good crops maintain throughout the entire state. He says that Illinois or those portions through which he passed do not have the crops that prevail in Iowa and Nebraska. He says that Iowa and Nebraska are the banner states thus far for crops this year. Mr. Towne had not been back to his old town for some 28 years.

MANY FRIENDS MEET FOR PLEASANT VISIT

The Thirty-Second Annual Reunion of Old Settlers Has Come and Gone Again.

The Old Settlers association celebrated their 32nd annual picnic at the grounds southwest of Union last Saturday. The arrangements were for a festival of friendship and reunion which was held on Friday and Saturday both Friday and Saturday, but the weather which we were glad to have because it was the need rain, prevented the meeting on Friday. Saturday they were a little tardy in arriving and the two days program as much as could be was crowded into Saturday afternoon. Many of the numbers were omitted and others shortened in order to get through by evening.

An excellent feeling prevailed, all greeting their friends with hearty handshakes and smiles, and the old timers slipping each other on the back in expressing their good feelings for the boom of pure friendship and enjoying the fellowship and good health, which is one of the peculiarities of this section. Again they could not help but think how that lower piece of wheat turned out and the oats done, with all the hay saved, not lost by the rain and having to keep the rows of the potato patch closed to prevent the "fatters" from running out in piles from the rows and getting sun-burned. One of the best prospects for corn since the time of the grasshoppers in 1879. Why should not all be wearing broad smiles.

The opening address was made by Creede Harris, which was one of the welcome in this he expressed, the welcome which flowed from every member of the old settlers association and every citizen of Union. He had been preceded by a prayer from the Rev. W. A. Taylor, involving divine guidance for all and returning the thanks which were due for the friendships, the associations, the prosperity and the peace of all good things which the hand of a living and gracious Father had given his children.

Following Mr. Harris was an address by the Rev. Taylor K. Surface, who formerly ministered to the church near Union, but who has been in the northern portion of the state for a number of years. His address was one of reminiscences and local history, he recalling many incidents familiar to many pioneers of this portion of the country. Following this the Hon. R. B. Windham spoke to the people of the early days and how they had worked to make the Nebraska of today. He had lived in Nebraska for over a half century and was well acquainted with the conditions of the early settlers. Hon. E. M. Pollard spoke to considerable length on the pending report of the constitutional convention which is to be voted upon on the 21st of September. As a member of the convention of which the report is, he was able to elucidate the places which was not entirely plain to those who was not well acquainted with the provisions. His talk was helpful to those who desired to vote intelligently.

Mrs. A. J. Beeson, in a manner all her own captivated the assembled people with a reading on Mother, which she gave effectively and with it a lesson of love for mother, who has sacrificed so much for the people of the world. She received an encore, which she responded to and the crowd expressed their pleasure at her rendition of the numbers by their ardent applause.

M. S. Briggs spoke briefly of the accomplishments of the generation which has preceded this and of the part which the old settlers had in making the country which we have today and asked would the people of today reciprocate by making a condition that the coming generation might be as greatly benefitted as we have been by the work of our forefathers.

Hon. Jesse L. Root of Omaha, followed with the conclusion of the program and his address was of a reminiscence character, saying that he had come to Plattsmouth thirty years ago and led his eager listeners down through that period of time to the present, which is the most propitious of all the ages of history. He received a happy greeting and applause at the close of his address. The greeting of the friends, the introductions of those not before acquainted, and the visiting, the well wishes, the season of happy association and the thirty-second annual picnic was closed with good feelings for all, and happy in the associating which the afternoon had afforded.

County Commissioner Not Well

C. F. Harris, the county commissioner, has been kept to his home for some time on account of an indisposition which has attacked him, but hopes to be about again in a short time. Mr. Harris, speaking about the repairs of the court house, said that the matter in his opinion, would have to be given to the voters for final decision as the amount involved to place the building in the condition to preserve the structure would require more outlay that the commissioners were empowered to spend without the sanction of the people and also that the levy had been made up already leaving no funds for the purpose. He intimated that the commissioners would have the people pass on the question.
